King Faisal Assassinated by Nephew

BEIRUT (UPI) — King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, the most moderate of Arab leaders and one of the world's most powerful monarchs, was assassinated today by a demented nephew in the midst of a Moslem religious ceremony.

His death threatened the Middle East with a new crisis that could have unforeseen effects on future oil prices.

Faisal — a world traveler who once tipped a Boston taxi driver with a $3,000 wristwatch — had been both prime minister and foreign minister. He was succeeded to the throne by his younger brother, Crown Prince Khalid, 62 who had served as first deputy prime minister.

Saudi Arabi's official Radio Riyadh, monitored in Beirut, said the 70-year-old Faisal was shot several times by his nephew Prince Faisal bin Musa'ed. The shooting occurred while the King, the spiritual leader of Saudi Arabia, was holding court on his gold-upholstered chair in the mirrored hall of his palace on the occasion of the birthday of the Prophet Mohammed.

The broadcast said the prince was "mentally unsound, had acted on his own and was not driven by anyone." It said the prince approached the king to express his greetings and that "when he got near the king he fired several shots at his majesty and wounded him." Robed attendants, each bearing giant scimitars, apparently were too surprised to act.

A sobbing announcer said later Faisal died in a hospital of his wounds.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, a friend of the monarch who conferred with him only last Wednesday, rushed to the State Department the moment he heard the news. A State Department spokesman called the death a great loss to the American position in the Middle East.

U.S. military personnel in the Persian Gulf area already had been on ready status and the Pentagon said the assassination prompted no immediate change.

All radio stations in the Arab world interrupted their normal programs to announce Faisal's death and all immediately switched to readings of the Koran, the holy book of Islam. Many went into official mourning, and a meeting of the Arab League Council in Cairo to consider action against Israel was suspended.

The Arab nations had hailed Faisal as a leader of the oil producing states which imposed an embargo during the 1973 Middle East War, a move that dealt a devastating blow to the Western economy. Saudi is the third oil producing nation after the United States and the Soviet Union.

The oil embargo quadrupled oil prices and meant Saudi Arabia earned $28.9 billion last year by selling one-fifth of all the oil consumed by non-Communist countries.

The Western nations of Europe expressed fear for the future of their oil supplies and France expressed concern that the murder may dangerously increase tensions in the Middle East. The overriding fear in the West may be that the staunchly anti-Russian Saudi could be succeeded by a left-leaning regime.

Israel, faced with a breakdown of the Kissinger negotiations with Egypt, also reacted swiftly. An official source called the murder a reminder of the instability of Arab regimes and warned that if a leftist regime took over in Saudi Arabia there could be dangerous shifts in the balance of power in the Middle East.

Although Faisal had supported the Arab cause throughout the many wars with Israel he had remained a force who urged moderation, partly as result of his long and close ties with the United States and his friendship with Kissinger. As spiritual leader of the world's 600 million Moslems he was the main bankroller of Egypt, Syria, Jordan and the Palestinians.

Kissinger had conferred with Faisal last week in Riyadh not only to discuss a possible lowering of oil prices but the vast array of American investments in Saudi Arabia.

The death already was having worldwide repercussions. Oil prices on the London stock market plunged as much as 24 cents, representing fears that the delicate state of Arab relations with the West could be impaired. It was Faisal who had sought moderation in the dealings with the West.

Reaction . . . Mourning And Concern

By UPI
The Moslem world mourned the death of a "pillar of Islam" today and Western nations wondered about the effect of the assassination of King Faisal of Saudi Arabia on the twin problems of oil and peace in the Middle East.

Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba and Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy were celebrating the birthday of the Prophet Mohammed at the Tunisian city of Kairouan, one of Islam's holy places.

Radio Tunis broadcast the news of Faisal's death and said: "The Moslem nation is mourning. It has lost one of the pillars of Islam."

Egypt, which received financial help from Saudi Arabia in the Arab wars against Israel, said President Anwar Sadat will lead the Egyptian delegation to attend Faisal's funeral. The Middle East

News Agency said Sadat telephoned the successor, King Khalid, and his brother Prince Sultan to convey Egypt's condolences.

In Western nations, the concern was about Middle East peace.

A State Department spokesman said the assassination could prove to be "a great loss to the United States' efforts in promoting peace in the Middle East."

In Vienna, Austrian Foreign Minister Erich Bielka said, "I am shocked by the news of this criminal act. I only hope it will not spoil the continuation of Saudi Arabia's peaceful development."

French government officials expressed concern that the murder, coming two days after the collapse of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's peace mission, may dangerously increase tensions in the Middle East.

Faisal's death marks the disappearance of the head of one of the most pro-Western regimes in the Arab world, officials in Paris said.

French radio reports said the Saudi Arabian army has been put in a state of alert and the royal "white guard" has thrown a ring of armor around the royal palace.

Stock market operators expressed fears the king's death may hamper efforts to work out a compromise over oil prices between oil-producing and oil-consuming nations at an upcoming international conference.

An official Israeli source in Jerusalem called the assassination a "regrettable and condemnable Arab method of changing governments."

"This is a reminder of the instability of Arab regimes," the source said.

"He (Faisal) was staunchly anti-Israel but had a conflict within himself because of his Western leanings and his desire that Arab countries not be dominated," the source said.

The source said that if a leftist regime took over in Saudi Arabia, it could signal dangerous shifts in the balance in the Middle East.

In Washington, however, Simcha Dinitz, Israeli ambassador to the United States, said the assassination should not hinder any future peace efforts in the Middle East.

Shaking Hands in Saudi Arabia

One of the last pictures made of King Faisal shows the Saudi Monarch shaking hands last week with U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who visited Saudi Arabia during his Israeli-Egyptian shuttle. (UPI)

New King . . . A Surprise Choice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American officials today nervously awaited reaction in the Middle East to the assassination of King Faisal of Saudi Arabia — especially possible repercussions on the Arab-Israeli conflict and the shaky petroleum situation.

Officials emphasized that they were certain the new leadership would be "pro-American."

Within two hours of Faisal's death, Crown Prince Khalid, 62, Faisal's younger brother, was selected to succeed Faisal to the throne. Khalid had served as first deputy prime minister.

Khalid's selection came as somewhat of a surprise to American officials, even though he was obviously next in line. The feeling in Washington was that Khalid would not wish to assume the heavy duties of the position and there was some speculation that it was a pro forma gesture for the time being.

U.S. officials said they foresaw little possibility of change in bilateral relations between the United States and Saudi Arabia. They expect that the joint programs for economic development of Saudi Arabia, as well as supply of U.S. arms and modernization of the country's national guard forces, will proceed on schedule, barring any unknown circumstances.

The Saudi official declaration that Faisal had been killed by a "deranged" relative was accepted at face value as presumably correct, but more devious motives were not ruled out entirely.

Uncertainty concerning the possible effect on the international scene, particularly on the Middle East and on the world economic front, was due to two factors:

—It came immediately following the collapse of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's efforts at bilateral settlement of the Israeli-Egyptian dispute. This means the negotiations will be tossed back to the Geneva Conference on the Middle East, where they will take on the larger aspects of big power confrontation because of the presence of the Soviet Union.

—It took place just as the major oil producing and consuming nations were getting ready for an April preparatory conference in Paris to work out the agenda for the full-fledge meeting of the two groups to try to deal with the issues arising from the escalation of oil prices.

Faisal, whose country possesses the world's largest known oil reserve, had exercised a powerful influence in both of those areas.

He was regarded by the United States and other Western nations as a moderating influence in the Arab world.

He had used his vast wealth to assist economically troubled Egypt, which gave President Anwar Sadat sufficient freedom from pressure by radical groups to cooperate with Kissinger in an effort to work out an Israeli withdrawal from Egyptian territory in the Sinai seized in the 1967 war.

Now that Sadat's faith in Kissinger's ability to work diplomatic miracles has been shaken, and the Egyptian president's chief financial supporter is dead, there naturally is some uncertainty as to just what line Egypt will take at the Geneva Conference.

S. Viet Troops Begin Abandoning Hue

DA NANG, South Vietnam (UPI) — South Vietnamese troops began abandoning the former imperial capital of Hue today in a Dunkirk-style evacuation from one of the bloodiest American battlefields of the war.

Western diplomats said the retreating troops boarded boats under fire at the nearby port of Tan My for the trip down the coast of the South China Sea to Da Nang.

The pullout from Hue, the third largest city and spiritual center of South Vietnam, left the Communists in control of 41 of the country's 44 provinces.

There was no indication how long it would take for the 20,000 retreating troops to leave Hue, a walled city of stately streets, Buddhist shrines and ancient artifacts.

More than 1,000 American Marines were killed or wounded during the 1968 Tet offensive in 26 days of fierce fighting for Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon.

In Washington, the Pentagon announced plans Monday to send the aircraft carrier Hancock from Hawaii to the Western Pacific this week.

The carrier's 1,500-man Marine helicopter squadron was expected to be used, if necessary, to evacuate Americans from Indochina.

The confused military situation in northern South Vietnam left an American Mennonite missionary and a Japanese assistant missing in Communist-controlled Quang Ngai city, 60 miles south of Da Nang.

Mennonite spokesmen in Saigon said they feared Earl Martin of New Holland, Pa., and assistant Yoshihiro Ichikawa were caught in fighting in the city Monday.

South Vietnamese authorities at Da Nang ordered a red alert, restricting all troops to barracks or field positions ready for immediate battle, throughout Quang Nam province because of the threat from Communist forces who have cut off the province from the rest of the country.

About half the 100,000 residents of the province capital Hoi An also fled to Da Nang today. Although Da Nang is the largest city in Quang Nam, Hoi An 15 miles to the south is the capital.

In a new drive later this morning, military sources said tank-led Communist troops crossed the Cambodian border and overran the Mekong Delta district capital of Ha Tien, 115 miles southwest of Saigon.

Western diplomats said South Vietnamese commanders made the decision to give up Hue Monday night and troops soon began boarding boats at Tan My, six miles to the east.

Military sources said the Communists cut Hue's communications with the rest of the country Monday night but the government relayed the pullout order through the radio of a warplane circling the city.

Nearly all of Hue's 300,000 residents, fearing a repetition of the 1968 Viet Cong massacre, fled Hue in recent days as the Communist siege tightened.

Viet Cong political cadres executed more than 3,500 civilians in Hue during the three weeks the Communists controlled the city in the 1968 Tet offensive.

An Evening When Someone Ripped Off the Globetrotters

By HUGH REYNOLDS

STONE RIDGE

It was another typical night on the road for the world famous Harlem Globetrotters basketball team: a packed house, a wild reception and the usual big win . . . the Harlem Globetrotters almost never lose.

Except for last night at Ulster County Community College.

Sheriff's deputies said thieves broke into a stationwagon owned by the team and made off with a vinyl clothing bag containing $1,865 in cash, a check in the amount of $6,000 (made out to one of the team members) and some clothing and other personal belongings.

Police theorize the theft might have been something of an accident caused by an over-eager souvenir hunter. "I think someone got a hell of a surprise when they found all that money in the clothing bag," said Detective Lieutenant Arthur Nersessian from the Ulster County Sheriff's office. Nersessian thinks the souvenir hunter grabbed the clothing bag — red, white and blue with the Harlem Globetrotters emblem on it — and ran. The automobile was not locked. It contained programs and at frequent intervals during the night members of the Globetrotter entourage returned to it for supplies.

The theft was discovered after the game by Kelly Leonard—it was his bag — who serves the team as its announcer and is one of the managers.

"He was more in shock than anything," recalled Keith Jordan, president of the Ulster County College Alumni Association, which sponsored the event. "He couldn't understand why they ripped him off," Jordan said.

Leonard's surprise was apparently shared by Jordan and the members of the organizing committee of the Alumni Association.

"We were kind of shocked, too," Jordan said. "It might sound naive but we didn't think it would happen."

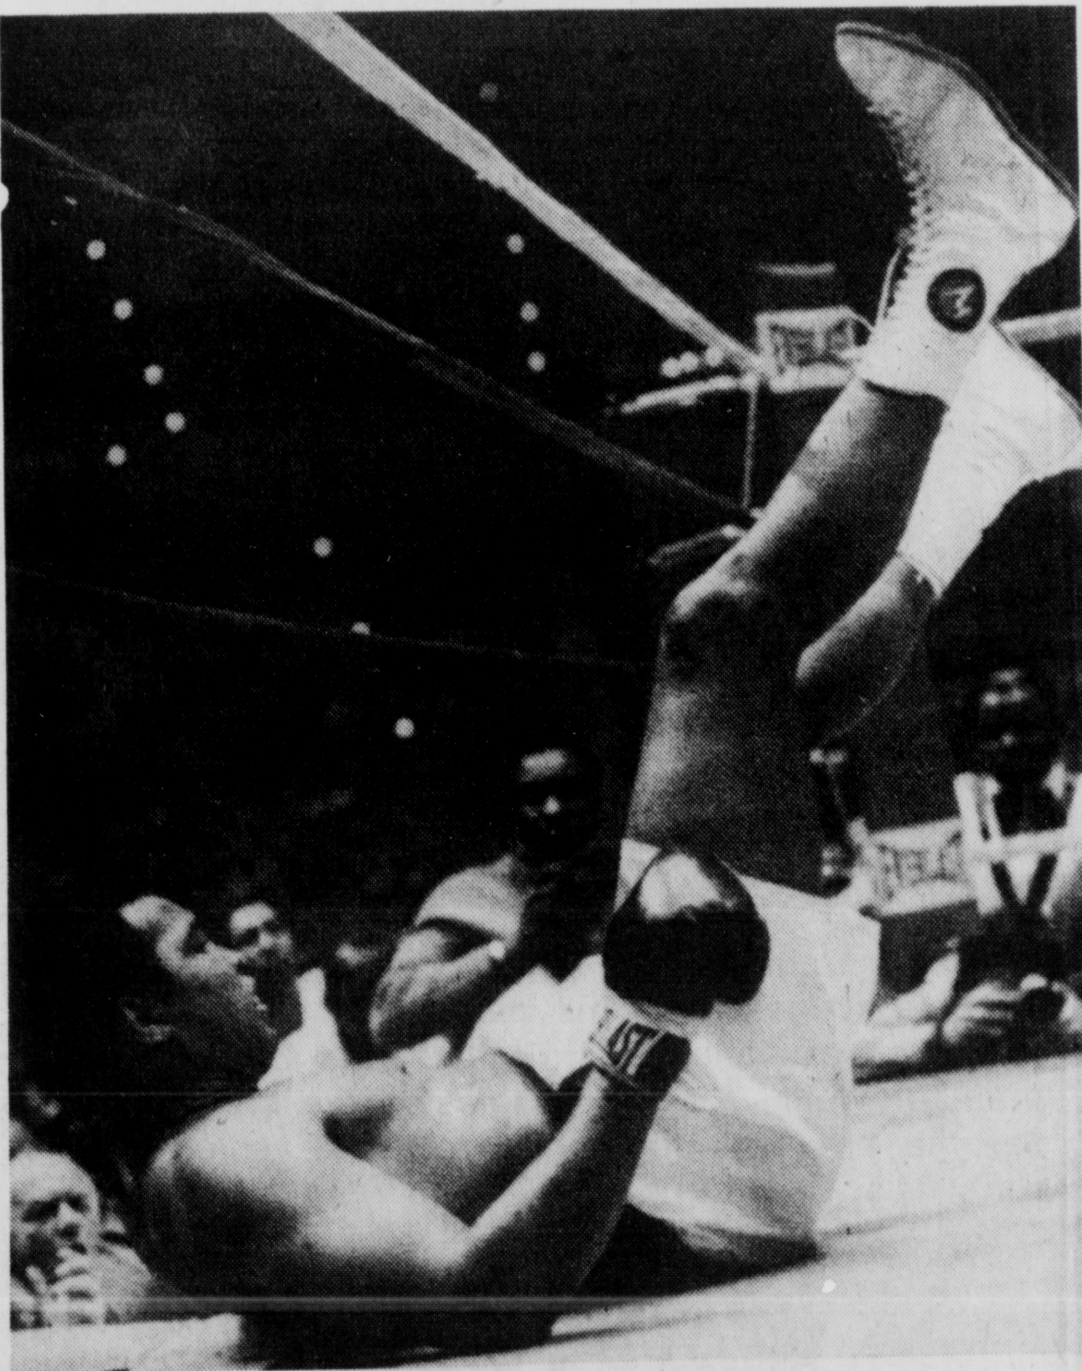

These fellas had come back for the second time. They were real nice fellas. They went out of their way to help us. They even autographed a basketball that we gave to a little boy this time. We feel real bad about this happening."

The game was a financial success with Jordan figuring the Globetrotter gross at between $11,000 and $12,000 with $1,300 going to the Alumni Association but Jordan at this point is more concerned with goodwill, not money.

"We'd like them back," says Jordan. Whether or not the Globetrotters return may depend on the goodwill of an erstwhile "souvenir hunter."

The police are apparently willing to do their part. "We're asking the person or persons who took the bag (and its contents) to return it. With no questions asked. All information will be held in strictest confidence," said Nersessian.

Persons with any information are advised to contact the sheriff's office.

Court of Appeals Weighing Constitutionality of Drug Law

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The state's highest court, following a lengthy and unprecedented session, is weighing the thorny question of whether New York's strict drug law is constitutional. The Court of Appeals, during more than four hours of arguments, devoted its entire calendar Monday to eight cases involving persons from Albany, Rochester and New York City who have been convicted on drug charges.

Several members of the court, including Chief Judge Charles D. Breitel, indicated they had philosophical differences with portions of the law. They did not say, however, whether they saw legal objections that would overturn the law.

"The more we toughen the law, the more drugs we have," Breitel said. The chief judge frequently said he did not agree that stiff penalties serve as a deterrent to crime.

One of the major concerns brought out was the issue of what would happen should the law be overturned. In the event such a ruling was made, it would seem likely that the previous law would be reinstated pending further action by the legislature—a move that could force cases decided under the new law back into the courts.

An assistant public defender from Rochester asked the seven-man court to dismiss the drug laws, saying "compassion must stand." An assistant state attorney general defended the statutes, however, saying drug abuse is "the number one social problem in the state and nation."

In 1973, when Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller was governor of New York, he vigorously pushed the stern revisions through the legislature, despite the objections of both civil liberties groups and law enforcement organizations.

The law imposes mandatory life sentences on drug pushers and sharply limits the use of plea bargaining.

A spokesman for the court said it was the first time that the state's top court combined so many cases to hear arguments on a state law.

Charles Steinman, an assistant public defender for Monroe County, said "compassion must stand and, instead, the law must fall."

He disputed figures cited by advocates of the law who linked narcotics to crime levels in the state. Steinman said the punishment was excessive and noted that "no other state in the union imposes mandatory life sentences."

Peter Dooley, an assistant state attorney general, argued that the lawyers for the defendants failed to show the law is unconstitutional "irregardless of whether you agree with the law."

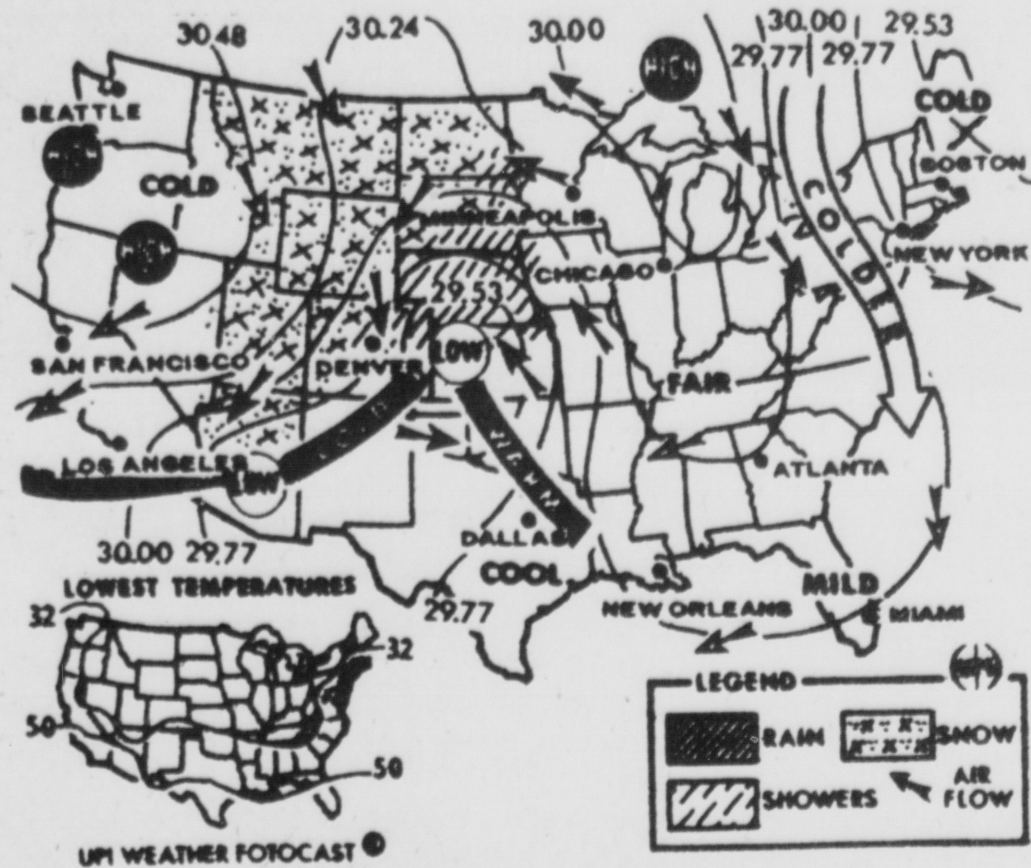

"What we're dealing with here is something recognized as the number one social problem in the state and nation," Dooley said, adding that "this law has been passed after much study."

Breitel said "there is really only one issue in all of this, and that is whether or not the legislature acted rationally" in passing the law.

The cases all involve drug convictions of persons who were found guilty under the present drug law, which went into effect in September, 1973.

Those whose cases were heard were: Larry C. Mosely and Doris A. McNair, both of Rochester; Roberta Fowler, Theodore Paul and Arthur Venable of Rochester; and three New York City residents, Rolando Montane, Imogene Broady and Mildred James.

Compromise on Tax Bill . . . No Progress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negotiators seeking a compromise tax cut bill made almost no progress Monday in their first meeting, held in such secrecy that the House and Senate chairmen sneaked out a back door afterward.

Final congressional passage could be pushed beyond an informal Wednesday deadline unless the two sides can come to grips with the major issues separating the House's $19.9 billion cut and the Senate's cut, now estimated at $34.3 billion.

There are offsetting tax increases for big oil companies, so the net reduction in taxation is $17.6 billion in the House bill and $30.6 billion in the Senate bill. President Ford originally proposed a cut of $16 billion.

Treasury Secretary William Simon was reported to have told the closed conference Ford would veto the bill if the Senate version prevailed.

The major sections of the bill — 1974 tax rebates, 1975 tax cuts and special payments to the working poor — are not the problem.

The deadlock has been caused by numerous Senate amendments including a tax credit for new home buyers and huge new child care tax breaks for working parents. Senate negotiators held to their positions Monday.

The only agreement of the day was to accept the Senate's version of special payments to the working poor. This will result in a payment equal to 10 percent of the income of workers earning less than $4,000 per year who have children, even if they paid no tax. It would be phased out between $4,000 and $8,000 income.

Also complicating the process is the drama of a confrontation between the veteran Senate Finance chairman, Russell Long, and the new House Ways and Means chairman, Al Ullman, who is leading his first tax conference.

Ullman and Long shunned reporters Monday, escaping out a back door through a storage room at the end of seven hours of sessions. Some other members also took various escape routes.

"Everybody devised their own way of getting the hell away from you guys," one member told a reporter.

Staff members also were forbidden to discuss the negotiations.

Rep. Herman Schneebeli of Pennsylvania, ranking GOP member of the Ways and Means Committee, told newsmen little progress was made. Asked if the negotiators could finish by Wednesday when the House is scheduled to begin its Easter recess, Schneebeli said, "Not at the present pace."

Biggest Setback in Four Months For Stock Market

By UPI

War in Indochina and the fear of war in the Middle East helped deal the stock market one of its biggest setbacks in four months Monday, according to Wall Street analysts.

The stock market has been one of the few sectors of the economy to show signs of strength this year.

The analysts blamed Monday's drop in prices on the failure of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's Middle East peace mission and fears of another Arab-Israeli war and Arab oil boycott. Increased war activity in Indochina also discouraged investors, they said.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a key index of New York Stock Exchange prices, plunged 19.63 points to 743.43, its worst loss since it fell 22.69 on Nov. 18, 1974, when Middle East tensions also played a role.

While other sectors of the economy have been sluggish since fall, the stock market has been booming. NYSE officials said the value of all shares listed on the exchange rose $100 billion in January and February.

Trading activity is 40 percent ahead of 1974. In Detroit, Ford Motor Co.

called nearly 6,300 workers back to three assembly lines over the next two months. President Lee Iacocca said Ford expects higher sales of small cars will result from "improved consumer confidence."

Meanwhile, economists at Morgan Guaranty Trust in New York said the "first signs ... for a reinvigorated economy later this year" are beginning to appear.

Liberty Ships to Fishing Reefs

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Twelve Liberty ships that helped open the Allied lifeline across the North Atlantic in World War II are headed for the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico — to become fishing reefs.

The ships, remnants of a fleet of thousands that escaped German U-boats, will be sunk off the Texas coast this year.

State officials think they will make good fishing reefs. If successful in attracting marine life, the project could take better advantage of the Gulf of Mexico's rich food supply and help detect offshore ocean pollution.

State Sen. A.R. Schwartz, chairman of the Texas Coastal and Marine Council sponsoring the project, said the old ships should provide excellent fishing and the best undersea exploration opportunities in the Western Hemisphere.

"The oceans are one truly unexplored universe left to science," Schwartz said. "I don't think anybody really knows what the productivity of the oceans could be with the artificial reef conditions."

Schwartz has been working on the project for two years. The Defense Department offered coastal states surplus World War II ships, and Texas claimed a dozen mothballed in a Beaumont shipyard since 1952.

Final approval for sinking the ships came from the Federal Maritime Administration last week.

The Coastal and Marine Council will award a contract for modification of the ships — including cutting away the upper portions, boring holes in the sides and removing all flatables, nonferrous metals and potential pollutants.

Amnesty Program Nears End

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One week is left of President Ford's twice extended amnesty program. Applicants flock to his clemency board in large numbers, but they have virtually stopped going to the military and the Justice Department.

Eligibles have until Monday night, March 31, to apply. Ford has twice added a month extension to his original Jan. 31 deadline. The last time he said this was the final extension. Officials said Monday they did not expect Charles Godell, the clemency board's chairman, to seek another one.

There are three different segments to Ford's program. Each has had a different track record.

The clemency board can wipe clean the records of about 100,000 men either convicted of draft evasion or given less than honorable discharges. The board got a slow start after Ford set it up in September, and by the new year it had received not more than a few hundred applications.

By Monday it had 15,800 applications — about one-sixth of the eligibles — and they were still pouring in. About 5,000 applications came in during each of the last three months. A spokesman for the board said it was hiring additional staff to handle the work.

Business at the Justice Department was slow. Only 578, 13 per cent of the 4,400 draft evaders at large, applied for amnesty. Of those, 92 came in during the last month.

Time Danger

When 3,000 New York City doctors went on strike they dramatically called attention to a serious problem which also exists to some extent in numerous other communities. What these young hospital interns and residents object to, with good reason, is the shockingly long hours on duty required of them.

To put the matter in perspective, consider that the average American works at his job less than 40 hours a week. The striking Committee of Interns and Residents sought a cutback to double that figure — to a mere 80 hours a week on duty, compared with present duty tours of up to 110 hours. The weekly amount of time required of the doctors is not their only cause for complaint; they also note that sometimes a doctor is on call for as long as 56 hours at a stretch.

New York's League of Voluntary Hospitals called the doctors' strike, the first major walkout of this kind in the United States, "irresponsible and unconscionable." Under different circumstances we might agree, on grounds that the welfare of patients must clearly come first.

But patient welfare is involved in another way. Such long hours on duty bring cumulative fatigue which poses easily imagined danger to patients in the care of these doctors. This is a matter of conscientious concern to many of the striking doctors who went out on strike and since have returned.

The Pre-Historics

Stories about a gigantic ancient flying reptile and an even more ancient fish were in the news at about the same time recently. Considered together, the stories suggest a chilling yet fascinating possibility.

Accounts of a pterosaur with a wingspan of at least 51 feet, more than twice that of the largest flying creature previously known, were drawn from an article in Science. It describes fossil remains of this winged carrion feeder which lived 60 million years ago in what is now west Texas.

The other creature in the news is the coelacanth, which swam the warm seas long, long before the giant pterosaur's wings shadowed this planet. The interesting thing, though, is that this story told of an American expedition which brought back to San Francisco two frozen specimens of the coelacanth caught in the Indian Ocean last year. The fish, once thought to be extinct, is a living fossil which has survived with little change for 300 million years.

This prompts an intriguing thought. Could it be that descendants of that airborne monster, creatures with wingspans outspreading the F-4 Phantom fighter jet and five or six times that of a condor, still soar unknown to civilized man in remote jungle areas?

It is not likely; the odds must be millions to one against such an anachronism. Still, it was as unlikely that living specimens of the coelacanth would be found 300 million years after it first appeared in the evolutionary cycle. Maybe those Amazon Indians who speak fearfully of great birds high above the jungle are not referring to man-made birds, after all.

"Sure, this one might make an interesting study, but is the subject RIDICULOUS enough?"

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON—There have been signs of late that the press—battle-scarred from its jousts with two Presidents and shaken by the enormity of its victory over them—has begun to wear a hair shirt.

The old blather about "responsibility" to keep secrets instead of exploding abuses has begun to creep back into press parlance.

The old pre-Watergate, pre-Vietnam ideals of partnership with government, of cozy intimacy with the high and mighty, of a camaraderie of secrets shared by this peerage but kept from the public, begins to appeal once more to a press concerned that its abrasive successes have earned it a bad name and a hostile reception.

At such times, we reporters need a reminder that we exist not to lie down with the lions but to fend them off, to cause the turmoil by which the free system cleanses and energizes itself.

"Gracious! That's not fit for your ears!"

By William F. Buckley

We were talking about the perspectives on Nixon inadvertently revealed by Washington Post mogul Benjamin Bradlee, in excerpts from an intimate book on John Kennedy abstracted in the current Playboy. The purpose of the inquiry is not to praise Nixon, nor to resurrect him, but to inquire into the proposition that he was unique in his reactions, his manners, and in the cast of his thought. We have seen that President Kennedy told Mr. Bradlee that he assumed LBJ was "on the take" before his election to the vice-presidency, but that that would not cause Kennedy to drop him before the 1964 election, because, after all, Kennedy needed Texas.

Kennedy, Bradlee reveals, was intolerant of other politicians. Nixon he thought "sick, sick, sick." "Nobody could talk like that" — like Nixon after his defeat in California in 1962 — "and be normal."

Normal psychologically, that is. Political normality is something else. When, in the 1960 election, the vote proved so close that everything appeared to hang on Illinois, Kennedy got a telephone call from Mayor Daley of Chicago, from whose lips he apparently heard for the first time, directed to himself, those elating words, "Mr. President" — "with a little bit of luck and the help of a few close friends, you're going to carry Illinois." Nixon's close friends went to jail. Kennedy's, keep getting re-elected mayor of Chicago.

Nixon is thought to have had a singular, pathological interest in the press. But here we find President Kennedy suggesting to Bradlee who might be hired by Newsweek (with which Bradlee was then associated) and why. Why not take Tom Wicker away from the New York Times? Wicker, said Kennedy, had written wonderful stories, by which, in context, is meant flattering to Kennedy. "It would be a hell of a coup for you to stick the Times by getting him." About another journalist being considered, Kennedy said that he was "a bit of a (expletive deleted)" but "I like him and I'd hire him."

None of the tapes I have seen show Nixon to have been more directly engaged in trying to use the press to cut down the political opposition than Kennedy was. "You ought to cut Rocky's ass open a little this week," he once suggested to Bradlee, "you" meaning "Newsweek." Segretti went around dropping dirty stories about potential rivals of Nixon. JFK apparently sought to make Newsweek his Segretti.

"The President asked if we were going to take a look at Rockefeller's war record. It is interesting how often Kennedy referred to the war records of political opponents. He had often mentioned Eddie McCormack and Hubert Humphrey in this connection, and here he was at it again with Rockefeller. 'Where was old Nelson when you and I were dodging bullets in the Solomon Islands?' he wondered aloud. 'How old was he? He must have been 31 or 32. Why don't you look into that?'"

Nixon, who was sick sick sick, managed an entire political campaign against Hubert Humphrey without once bringing up Humphrey's war record.

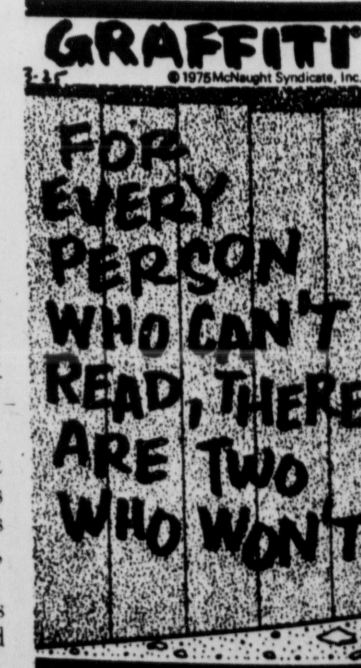

The story about JFK vs the steel companies is revealing, not to say robust. Bradlee variously quotes Kennedy: "Are we supposed to sit there and take a cold, deliberate (expletive deleted)? ... They (expletive deleted) us and we've got to try to (expletive deleted) them. ... We're going to give it to them and screw 'em."

And, as noted, the press was always getting him down. There was all that talk of a Kennedy dynasty, which JFK thought "unfair" and became the subject of heated discussion at a Kennedy party. JFK led off with a toast. I quote Bradlee: "He wanted to make a toast to the Attorney General, he said, and went on to describe how he had been talking that afternoon with Tom Patton, president of Republic Steel. 'I was telling Patton what a son of a bitch he was,' the President said with a smile.

"He waited with that truly professional sense of timing so instinctive to the best comedians (Nero must have had it), and went on. 'And he was proving it.' Patton asked me, 'Why is it that all the telephones of all the steel executives in the country are being tapped?' And I told him that I thought he was being wholly unfair to the Attorney General and that I was sure that it wasn't true. And he asked me, 'Why is it that all the income tax returns of all the steel executives in the country are being scrutinized?' And I told him that, too, was wholly unfair, that the Attorney General wouldn't do any such thing. 'And then I called the Attorney General and asked him why he was tapping the telephones of all the steel executives and examining the tax returns of all the steel executives. ... And the Attorney General told me that was 'wholly untrue and unfair.' And then another Stanislavsky pause. 'And, of course, Patton was right.'"

And so it turns out that boys will be boys, even in Camelot.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

News Belongs to the People

The story of the Central Intelligence Agency-Howard Hughes Glomar Explorer is just such a reminder. Some of the nation's top news organizations knew about the abortive attempt to salvage an 18-year-old Soviet sub that sank to the bottom of the Pacific.

They chose, for reasons weighty and altruistic, not to reveal it. We made the opposite choice.

Certainly, there are legitimate secrets which ought not to be revealed. Sometimes, the right to the public to know and the press to print should be voluntarily subordinated to the interests of national security or the safety of endangered individuals.

In the past, we have been amenable to such appeals from CIA Director William Colby and his predecessors. Last May, we received a letter from Colby which declared:

"Please let me express my appreciation and that of the Agency for your recent cooperation on the wording of one of your stories so as to protect significant and still continuing intelligence sources."

But this time, Colby's arguments for secrecy were not compelling. It was hardly conceivable that the Glomar expedition was still a secret from Soviet intelligence.

Thousands of people in our government and industry had played some part in it over a seven-year span; some of them were leaking it out; newsmen were around asking questions; a ring of thieves and blackmailers had broken into the Hughes offices in Hollywood and had stolen documents describing the Glomar operation; and on Feb. 8, 1975, the Los Angeles Times had published key ingredients of the story.

So the Russians knew. We knew they knew. They knew we knew they knew. But, as Colby told us, it would be "rubbing their noses in it" to let the American people know.

What was at stake in publishing, then, was not national security but international etiquette, not American secrets but Soviet face, not the sabotage of a second Glomar mission but the ruffling of Russian tail feathers if we should go ahead with it.

These are considerations not to be mocked, but we hold them to be insufficient reasons for renewing the dread precedent of cutting off the news — the windpipe of the American system.

All right. If there is no compelling reason to suppress, is there a public need to know a story that might inconvenience the conduct of our diplomacy? We think so. An estimated $350 million was spent outside of the legitimate appropriations process — in a gamble to recover an archaic diesel sub, obsolete missiles and outdated codes.

No doubt this submerged museum piece would have been of some intelligence value had it not fallen apart. But was it worth a sum that, for instance, could have financed the down payment on 100,000 new homes? Was it a national necessity or was it an admiral's toy?

Until the story was published these questions were not being asked. Now they will be asked by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, as part of his inquiry into CIA operations.

The Glomar incident confirms again that congressional oversight over costly and provocative CIA operations has been a bad joke — such a bad joke that the second most senior member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Stuart Symington, D-Mo., knew nothing about Glomar until he read it in the press.

The late President Harry Truman, who founded the CIA, began to grow uneasy about it in his later years. In 1963, he wrote for the North American Newspaper Alliance:

"We have grown up as a nation, respected for our free institutions and for our ability to maintain a free and open society. There is something about the way the CIA has been functioning that is casting a shadow over our historic position, and I feel that we need to correct it."

Because we share this apprehension, we couldn't permit the CIA chief to determine what we should print. This raises the enduring questions: Who owns the news? Who should define the news?

The government owns valid security data, but it does not own the news. Newsmen may define the news, but they, too, don't own it. The news belongs to the people.

On matters that are clearly news, the press has no right to collaborate with the government to suppress that which belongs to the people. For freedom of the press exists only as an adjunct of the peoples' right to know what's going on.

Nixon in Perspective — II

Nicholas Von Hoffman

The Death of A Sharp Dealer

Henry Ford was a visionary, and, if some of the ways he spent his money appear naive and eccentric, they were undeniably informed by values more elevated than those shaped by acquisitive gluttony. Carnegie was an impassioned philanthropist. The great iron master seemed more interested in giving money away for useful purposes than making it. He, like Julius Rosenwald, who built Sears, Roebuck, was as creatively resourceful in his benefactions as he was in business.

The Golden Toad, on the other hand, seems never to have given a damn, never to have believed in anything, never to have served any interest but his luxury and his rapacity. Even his support of the now deposed Greek dictatorship is supposed to have derived from his financial interest, not from any faith in fascism.

The Golden Toad was so placed that he didn't have to buy off public opinion. Holding the passports of who knows how many countries, constantly shifting his bases of operation from nation to nation, he had no practical need to play the hypocrite, no need to convince others he had loyalties and allegiances of any sort. Occasionally, the indifference with which he was regarded hurt him in his business dealings, as was the case when he tried to stick the state of New Hampshire with a lovely coastline oil refinery. Having never done anything for anybody, the people there had no hesitation about kicking out the little 24-carat frog.

Truly a one-man multinational corporation, he could roam the world putting together deals such as the one which resulted in the tanker "Tina Onassis." "The ship," his obituary tells us, "was built in Germany, mortgaged in the United States, insured in London, financially controlled from Monaco and manned by Greeks. It flew the flag of Liberia."

For him, the world was to loot. He said, "My favorite country is the one that grants maximum immunity from taxes, trade restrictions and unreasonable regulations," which is no country at all. It follows that this patriot fathered the super-tanker, that dreadful ship with the capacity to pollute seas and oceans, our common international inheritance. Had they scattered his ashes on the sea, it would have created a 10,000-square-mile oil slick.

Having made his money on that low form of cleverness called sharp dealing—he was once criminally indicted by the United States—on his death there is nothing for the obituary writer to say but to inventory his possessions, the wives and girl friends, the houses and apartments, the gold fixtures in the toilets of his yacht, and the size of his wardrobe.

Yet there may be a few people who will regret the death—mourn is too strong a word—of this non-tragic Greek. The head waiter at Maxim's restaurant in Paris, where he had a regular table, will have to find a new customer.

The Golden Toad with ruby eyes, diamond claws and platinum tongue is dead. Aristotle and Socrates can now reclaim the honor of their names.

Nigerian Drummer at Bard

The famous Nigerian drummer and exponent of Afri-culture, Babatunde Olatunji, will be at Bard, Annandale-on-Hudson, for a performance at 8:30 p.m. in the College Dining Commons on Wednesday.

Olatunji's "Drums of Passion" recording, a million of which were sold, set him on the road to fame, when he turned to the concert stage after completion of studies for his doctorate in Public Administration at Columbia University.

He said he wanted to reach all people, and that music was the most certain way of doing so. Since that time, Olatunji, who founded the Otunji Center in Harlem for the teaching of African culture, has become the most famous name in Afri-culture in the world.

Homemade Chocolate For Easter

With Easter practically upon us, what do we think about?—Chocolate!

The Kingston area is fortunate in that we have many shops that carry a large assortment of chocolate treats—bunnies, eggs, chicks even tiny rabbits on motorcycles for the speed fan in the family.

Down through the ages wherever chocolate was sold that's where the people would gather. Even today, students, and many adults, find times when the yearning for a good piece of homemade chocolate is the only thing that will satisfy. LIFE highlights three such places in Kingston: Ambrose Bros. Confectionery at 364 Broadway near Kingston Hospital; Nekos Pharmacy at 309 Wall Street; and the Ambrose Luncheonette at 612 Broadway near the Community Theatre.

LIFE

In all three locations, Easter candy is made on the premises with the finest ingredients. The custom of making Easter candy is a family trademark at all three addresses and the special care and handling has always been kept at high quality standards.

And did you ever realize there is an art known as chocolate sculpture? Sculptors have worked in every medium imaginable. One Richard Mack, a food coordinator at a Texas luxury hotel, perfects to carve in chocolate. Milk chocolate figures are his speciality and among those he has created are a five-foot Easter Egg, a five-inch fawn, and a giant truck.

Try those in your children's Easter baskets.

Mr. Mack uses no special tools—just well-sharpened kitchen knives.

And if you believe that opposites in food also attract then you belong to the Society of Those Who Savor the Combination of Chocolate and Almonds. These two compatible foods have gone together happily since at least as far back as the Aztec period in Mexican history. To this day, ground almonds are a traditional ingredient in Mexican chocolate.

The Easter hostess may want to try this on her guests—an elegant Hot Chocolate Party. All you need is hot chocolate poured from a fine porcelain chocolate pot into matching cups; crystal decanters with a choice of liqueurs to bring out the flavor of the beverage; brightly-printed linen napkins and silver spoons to give the party look.

Individual Easter bunnies should complete the picture!

HVP Benefit Book Sale Set

Take a great idea, mix it well with equal amount of enthusiasm, whip up some dedicated voluntary helpers, offer it hot or cold, rain or shine, and call it the "Last Saturday of the Month Book Sale" for the benefit of Hudson Valley Philharmonic.

Since this idea has come into being more than three years ago, a great many book buffs flock to 254 Albany Avenue, Kingston, where this monthly sale will be held on March 29. The door will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

More and more book buffs bring back some of their last month's purchases, especially paperback mysteries, westerns and science fictions, according to a spokesman for the group. These paperbacks are in great demand and are sold again.

The largest section is the hardback fictions. There one can often find books long out of print.

Hardback fictions and paperback science fictions are priced at 25 cents, paperbacks at 10 cents, recent best-sellers, old and autographed books are priced higher. Magazines sell at five cents apiece.

The Egg . . . a Symbol to Jews and Christians

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

The egg is as important a symbol to observant Jews at Passover as it is to members of the Eastern Orthodox and other Christian faiths at Easter.

Eggs prepared two ways are among the ceremonial foods at the seder supper on the evening of March 27 that marks the beginning this year of Passover, the Jews' annual festival of freedom.

"The seder in my father's parents' home always started with sliced hard-boiled eggs in salt water," said Ruth Perry in an interview.

Mrs. Perry, of Elkins Park, Pa., is president of the Women's League for Conservative Judaism, a religious organization with 800 Sisterhoods (chapters) in North America alone.

There are many interpretations of the meaning of the egg, Mrs. Perry said. To some it symbolizes the life cycle, to others, spring, and to still others, the Jews themselves.

Salt water represents the tears shed during slavery in Egypt in the time of the Pharaohs.

Another egg, this one roasted, is among five foods on the seder plate used during the service as the meal progresses. Mrs. Perry said that seder, meaning order, refers to the ceremonial sequence prescribed centuries ago, but that ceremonial foods vary slightly.

Karpas, for example, designates a green vegetable to be dipped into the salt water.

"Some people use scallions, others, parsley and I even know of one family that uses a cold boiled potato," Mrs. Perry said.

Zero'a, a roasted lamb bone, or a symbol of it, represents the paschal lamb that was sacrificed on the first Passover in Egypt and subsequently at the Temple in Jerusalem. The Perrys substitute a boiled chicken wing that has been singed.

The other ceremonial foods are maror, or bitter herbs, a reminder of the bitterness of slavery. In European and American tradition, it usually consists of horseradish. The fifth food is haroset, a mixture of fruit, nuts, cinnamon and wine symbolizing the mortar used to build cities for the Pharaohs. Its pleasant taste represents God's kindness, which made the bitterness of slavery more bearable.

The full dinner menu is a holiday meal that has much in common with other religious and cultures. Its variety depends largely on family tradition, Mrs. Perry said. Her family, of Russian and Lithuanian heritage, usually serves gefilte fish (cold fish dumplings) with red horseradish, chicken soup with matzo balls, mendlen and sliced hsel. Hsel is stuffed chicken or turkey neck skin. Mendlen are marble-sized crisp baked puffs.

All leavening is forbidden during the holiday to commemorate the unleavened bread baked during the exodus from Egypt, so stuffing for the hsel and the turkey that follows is made with cracker-like matzos or meal made from them.

Mrs. Perry said some Sephardic, or oriental, Jews allow rice for the holiday, but members of the Conservative movement shun it then, as they do other grains.

The Perrys round out their meal with vegetables, fresh cranberry sauce, either fresh fruit compote or sliced strawberries and pineapple, a sponge cake, tea, macaroons, nuts and candy.

While some families still do all their own cooking, women today have less time to spend in the kitchen, said Mrs. Perry.

"Coincidentally or perhaps as a result, we have all kinds of quick foods — instant onions, mixes and so on, that are kosher for Passover (prepared under rabbinical supervision to meet the dietary laws of the holiday).

"Thirty or 40 years ago, your grandmother couldn't buy a mix. Everything had to be done from scratch. But now you can get canned fruit and vegetables and even canned matzo balls that are kosher for Passover."

45th Wedding Anniversary

Mrs. Gray is employed at Kingston Hospital. Her husband is retired from the Ulster County Highway Department. Mr. and Mrs. Gray have five children, 19 grandchildren, and three great grandchildren. A money tree was presented to them by the 100 relatives and friends in attendance.

Silver Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Janitz of Phoenixia were guests of honor Saturday, Mar. 15 at a party in Skytop Restaurant, given in observance of their 25th wedding anniversary. Hosts were the couple's three children and son-in-law: Robert and Karen, at home; and Mrs. and Mrs. William (Christine) Ross of Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. Janitz were married March 18, 1950. Judges Committee Head for Pageant

"Talent is far and away the basis for the ultimate selection of Miss Ulster County." This is how John Lawson, named to head the judges committee, described the upcoming pageant. The 1975 scholarship contest is scheduled for Saturday night, May 17, in the M. Clifford Miller School, Lake Katrine.

Lawson, who has judged various pageants in the past, said that the talent judging is rated on a 10 point basis, while other aspects are limited to five. The judges will first interview the contestants so that they may begin to formulate a personal picture of each young lady. The judges ballots will eventually be tabulated by an impartial auditing firm to first select the finalists and ultimately Miss Ulster County.

In addition to competing for the title of Miss New York State, the local winner will receive a $1,000 scholarship. The first runnerup receives a $500 scholarship and the second runnerup, a $350 scholarship.

Entries are currently being accepted for the pageant. Any girls, 18-28, in school or out, is eligible to participate. To receive an entry form interested persons should contact Colleen Crespiro at Ulster Savings Bank, George Leomburno at 30 Austin Avenue, Saugerties, or the Chamber of Commerce of Ulster County in the Governor Clinton Hotel in Kingston. Orientation sessions are being arranged for the pageant contestants.

First Place Flower Show Award Presented

Mrs. William Waldele, as last year's flower show chairman, was presented with an award for first place in flower show schedules in the Third District for 1974 at the March 12 meeting of Saugerties Society of Little Gardens. The meeting took place at the home of Mrs. Gordon Keeley.

Club member, Mrs. Robert Freer presented a program entitled "the Magic of Recycling." She demonstrated clever craft items and suggested helpful household and garden hints utilizing recycled materials. Hints included: using newspapers for garden mulch, tying up tall plants to stakes with old nylon stockings, using orange and grapefruit rinds for mulch around acid-craving plants and shrubs such as azaleas. Members were urged to give old magazines to nursing homes and hospitals. It was noted that recycling one ton of paper saved 17 trees. Mrs. Freer urged everyone to support recycling programs and to buy items made of recycled materials.

A horticulture report was given by Mrs. Augustus Modjeska. Mrs. Waldele gave the conservation report using interesting facts about birds. A report on the meeting of Federated Gardens Clubs of New

Val-To-Me Productions Schedule Spring Concert

The spring concert of the Val-To-Me Productions, with the theme, One More Time, has been scheduled for Friday night, May 9, at the Governor Clinton Hotel starting at 8:30 o'clock.

All spectrums of the arts will be represented by talented young people from all areas of the Mid-Hudson Valley in this presentation.

There will be soloists, dancers, models, dramatic readings, the Broadway East Arts Theater, a young gospel chorus and an art exhibition.

Other highlights include vocal stylings by Terri Francis Jackson, backed up by the Brad Griffin Trio. Following the two-part concert, dancing will follow to the music of a "natural soul" group.

Proceeds from the May 9 spring concert will be used to provide cash awards to the black boy and girl graduate of Kingston High School who have made the most scholastic improvement during their senior year.

Last year's winners, Miss Cynthia Strong and Jonathan

Perry, are, according to reports, living up to the expectations of the teachers who selected them by keeping outstanding scholastic records at their respective colleges.

An additional highlight of the evening's entertainment will be the presentation of six trophies for Black Achievement to deserving citizens of the Mid-Hudson Valley area.

Tickets for the spring concert will be available shortly and may be purchased at the door.

Sick of Friends Who Aren't "That Sick"

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please try to get it across to people who are sick that they should stay home? And if their kids are sick, they should keep them home too?

One night last week, we invited another couple over for bridge. When they arrived, I opened the door, and Mrs. X greeted us with a voice so hoarse she could hardly talk. Then she wiped her dripping nose and went into a coughing fit.

I said: "Oh, if you aren't well, maybe we'd better make it another night—when you're feeling better."

She said: "Oh, I'm not that sick." Then she walked in and sat down. Her husband said he just got over something that had been going around and he must have given it to her.

She kept wiping her nose and coughing all evening. She even asked if she could see the children. (Imagine?) I told her I thought maybe she'd better not.

Abby, I couldn't wait until that couple went home. I wish you'd put this in your column for all those inconsiderate carriers who insist on going to work and school to spread their germs around.

Sick of Carriers

Dear Sick: Here's your letter. I'm as sick of inconsiderate carriers as you are.

DEAR ABBY: On last New Year's Eve, I drove 150 miles to surprise my husband. I surprised him all right! Him and her both.

After she left and I finished my screaming and cursing, we settled down to a sensible conversation. I don't know what made me give him the chance to explain, but I'm glad I did. He told me that I am the woman he loves, and I believe him.

We have talked many times since then and are slowly recovering from this single act of unfaithfulness. My husband travels for a living, and what happened to him is more likely to happen to a traveling man, no matter how much he loves his wife.

We all make mistakes. But the biggest mistake of all is refusing to forgive and forget.

LOVED IN KENTUCKY
DEAR LOVED: Hooray for you!

DEAR ABBY: You said that when a young, beautiful girl marries a man who is old enough to be her father, he is usually very rich — or famous.

Well, You're dead wrong. I am 15 and my husband is 49, and as for his being either rich or famous — forget it. We live on a farm and barely have enough money to pay our bills.

"Dumb chick," you might say. Sure, I could have maybe married some 20-year-old kid who wouldn't give a darn about me or the kids. My husband takes real good care of me and our two sons, who are 1 1/2 years and three weeks old.

I think you owe me and a lot of other young girls an apology.

SATISFIED

DEAR SATISFIED: If I offended you, I'm sorry. I said "usually," which allows for some exceptions, but I never expected to hear from so many exceptions.

DEAR ABBY: I read about that woman whose husband refused to take a bath, and it was interfering with their marriage.

You should have told her to invite her husband to take a bath with her. That's what I did when I had the same problem, and now my husband is the cleanest man in town.

MRS. CLEAN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 46-year-old married man who works in a large office. We're all pretty friendly.

Last Sunday, my wife was out of town, so I went to a neighborhood restaurant alone. A young woman who works at the office came in (alone) and sat at the bar. Since I was at the bar I offered to buy her a drink. She seemed eager to accept. She had two, then I asked her to join me for dinner. She did. We had a nice time chatting about the people at the office.

After dinner she said: "Your place or mine?" I laughed, and said it sounded like she was propositioning me. She said she was. I nearly fainted. Then I said I didn't think it would be a very good idea because I was a married man, and besides we had to work together.

The next day I heard that she told some of the girls at the office that I had spent the night with her and that I was a "lousy lover." It's pretty embarrassing, Abby. I'm wondering if maybe the best way to handle it is to quit my job and clear out.

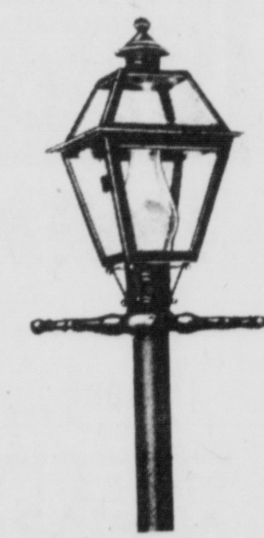

BAD-MOUTHE

DEAR BAD: QUIT YOUR JOB? Never! Just tell a few of your men friends at the office that nothing happened. They'll believe you, and you can bet they'll circulate your side of it.

Judge Begins Jury Charge In McGiven-Culhane Trial

By MATT SPIRENG

KINGSTON

Presiding Judge Robert Ecker began charging the jury today as to the points of law which they must consider as the third murder trial of Gerald McGiven and Charles Culhane moved into the last phase before the jurors begin their deliberations as to the guilt or innocence of the two defendants.

Summations by the prosecution and defense lasted the entire day Monday, with defense attorneys Karen Peters and Henry Rothblatt challenging the accuracy of the testimony by the chief prosecution witness, Deputy Sheriff Joseph Singer and First Assistant DA Michael Kavanagh, who has prosecuted the case with DA Francis J. Vogt, charging that the defendants lied on the witness stand.

Of the three attorneys, Rothblatt—widely known for his defense work—gave the most dramatic summation, modulating his voice from a near whisper to a shout and twice getting to his knees on the floor to demonstrate the position the defense contends Culhane was in when he was shot.

Telling the jurors that the prosecution's "entire case stands or falls" on the truth of Singer's testimony, Rothblatt charged that Singer's version of what happened Sept. 13, 1968 was an "hallucination" brought on by Singer's "guilt feelings" because he had done nothing to stop the death of his partner, William Fitzgerald, at the hands of inmate Robert Bowerman, who also died in the shootout.

Going through a series of points, most of which were brought up earlier in the summation by Ms. Peters, Rothblatt indicated that each alone was enough to cause reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the defendants.

"We are convinced . . . that you will vote not guilty," Rothblatt said in concluding his summation, which lasted more than an hour.

Following Rothblatt, Kavanagh opened by telling the jurors, "I'm not going to try to arouse your emotions or appeal to your passions. I'm not going to get down on the floor; I'm not going to wave my arms; I'm not going to raise my voice."

Kavanagh then told the panel, "There is really only one question left for you to answer: Who's telling the truth, Joe Singer or Mr. McGiven and Mr. Culhane?"

"Somebody who took that stand lied; it's either Joe Singer or the defendants," Kavanagh continued, later terming Rothblatt's reference to hallucinations by Singer as "outlandish," and launching an attack on the truthfulness of the defendants.

"They have a motive to lie. They have a reason to fabricate their story," Kavanagh said of McGiven and Culhane.

Referring to apparent inconsistencies in the testimony by Singer, Kavanagh said, "Those inconsistencies about incidental details are a badge of truth."

Using a blackboard with the top view of a car drawn on it, Kavanagh summarized Singer's testimony, and then went through a piece by piece verbal re-creation of the prosecution's contention that McGiven and Culhane participated in the escape attempt that resulted in Fitzgerald's death.

Referring to physical and scientific evidence before the jury, Kavanagh refuted points in the testimony by McGiven and Culhane. "Their story is so full of holes . . . it's got to be a lie," Kavanagh said.

Charging that unlike Singer, who did not know what the physical evidence would show before he first told his story of what happened in the car, Culhane and McGiven knew what the evidence was and patterned their stories around it.

Training Class for County Workers

Robert A. Reynolds (R), an instructor for the Management Institute at Ulster County Community College, stresses a point during class in Fundamentals of Supervision in the Legislature's chambers at the Ulster County Office Building. Included in the 30-member class are (L-R) Frank Fabbie, clerk of the county legislature; Candy Watkinson, physical therapist, and Dolores Whitaker and Melvina Jones, social service examiners. Similar classes in data processing and interpersonal relations are offered weekly through the Office of Local Government, UCCC and the Ulster County Civil Service Department. (Freeman photo)

State Legislature and Carey's Budget . . . 'A Leaner Proposal'

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The state legislature was ready to pass a pared down version of Gov. Hugh L. Carey's 1975-76 state budget today and then beat it out of town before a fight developed over what tax hikes, if any, would be needed to finance it.

Basically the legislature's $10.4 billion edition of the budget—$297 million leaner than Carey's "austerity" proposal—was a bare bones outline of what both Republican and Democratic leaders could agree the state would spend in the next fiscal year.

Any talk about program enrichment, whether it be the minor adjustments Senate Republican leaders admitted might be in the offing or major increases in spending for education, local assistance, mass transit and other areas embraced by Democrats, raises the specter of new taxes.

And with that scenario, the legislature planned to approve its compromise budget either today or Wednesday and then recess for the Easter-Passover holiday, returning to Albany April 14 to re-engage the tax battle.

The battle lines were drawn Monday by separate news releases issued by the Senate Finance and the Assembly Ways and Means committees.

Sen. John J. Marchi, head of the Senate committee, said no new taxes, including the dime-a-gallon increase in the state gas tax, would be needed to pay for the $10.4 billion.

Although a release by Assemblyman Burton G. Hecht, chairman of Ways and Means, avoided the subject of new taxes, Speaker Stanley Steingut later outlined a plan that would raise $300 million by increasing taxes on corporations and banks, estates, non-cigarette tobacco and liquor.

In essence, the budget amounted to the legislature's version of a bare bones budget of what both Republicans and Democrats could agree on as necessary spending for the next fiscal year, which begins April 1.

Still to be dealt with are the important questions of how much additional money can be found for education, mass transit, local assistance and other programs.

Senate Majority Leader Warren M. Anderson said major new expenditures were possible, "but I don't think that we are going down that road."

Regarding the possibility that Democrats in control of the Assembly might act on programs requiring substantially more state revenues, Anderson said, "I wouldn't think any new taxes would be approved."

Actually, cuts made by the fiscal committees from Carey's original budget totaled $719 million. However, these were offset by a shifting of funds and increases in some appropriations.

Some of the more interesting aspects of the spending plan, which was expected to be acted on Tuesday, include:

- A $250,000 miscellaneous item for Lt. Gov. Mary Anne Krupsak was left intact, despite expectations that it might be trimmed by the legislature.

- Restoration of $365,000 for the so-called Kinzel Commission on public pensions. The governor had proposed abolishing the commission.

- Continuance of the office of welfare inspector general "as an autonomous body" in the comptroller's department — a rejection of Carey's plan to dismantle the watchdog post and transfer its work to the Social Services Department it is designed to monitor.

- A $625,000 appropriation for a bicentennial barge which was scuttled by Carey in his original budget.

- Restoration of $625,000 for the Green Thumb Program which hires older citizens to work on programs "to improve our natural environment"—another plan eliminated by Carey.

- Restoration of $2.4 million for continuing the Department of Mental Hygiene's nursing school program at 11 nursing schools.

The cuts agreed upon by legislative leaders broke down like this:

- $155.3 million in local assistance, including a $150 million of the revenue from the gas tax hike Carey said would be funneled back to localities.

- $58 million in state purposes, mainly through consolidation of agencies and other economy measures, and,

- $9 million in capital construction.

In addition to the $58 million cut in state purposes, the fiscal committees outlined an additional $30 million across the board decrease in personnel services costs "to insure that agencies fully implement the terms of the governor's announced freeze on filling vacant positions."

Lake Minnewaska Proposal . . . Controversy Continues

LAKE MINNEWASKA

Mrs. Lucille Phillips, wife of the owner of the Lake Minnewaska resort, has directed an open letter to the sportsmen's clubs of Ulster County "and particularly the Rondout Valley Rod and Gun Club, perhaps others who live near the Shawangunk Mountains may be interested."

"Ever since your vociferous attacks on the wildly imaginative interpretations of our future plans for Lake Minnewaska, I have been tempted to reply in kind and remind you that your memory is short," Mrs. Phillips writes.

After reviewing facilities and services made available to hunters after her family purchased Lake Minnewaska in 1955, Mrs. Phillips said: "If hunting and snow-mobiling are important to the majority of voters, then before any sale of the Sam's Point area is consummated with the Palisades Interstate Park Commission (PIPC), serious thought should be given to deed restrictions which would guarantee these rights and privileges. If on the other hand the majority feel that noise intrusion in a wilderness area is objectionable, or that the area is more important as a game refuge, it probably should be guaranteed that the area will be protected in much the same way that Awosting Lake is being protected—by a philosophy of difficulty of access.

"We are thankful that the PIPC has steadfastly resisted opening the Awosting Lake part of the state park to the general public in this way. It is just as beautiful and unspoiled now as it was when we owned it, but that kind of protection is expensive, and there is at present no guarantee that the PIPC philosophy will not change.

"If you who live in the Town of Wawarsing want to retain control of your use of your part of the Shawangunk Mountains, this should be carefully considered. By all means, consider the future dollar value of the land in question."

Noting that the offer for the Sam's Point land is $300 an acre, Mrs. Phillips then reviews the various local, state and federal master plans for the area, noting that the Town of Rochester plan mentions the resort industry as being an "attractive amenity to the town as well as a major source of income in terms of tourist dollars, taxes and employment, and stresses the need to encourage such land uses. The Ulster County Master Plan and the Ulster County Planning Board seem to favor a standstill, if not a cutback, in resort activity in order to keep the mountain available for a future enlarged state park or perhaps for a strictly wilderness area. The people from Washington have suggested in their plan that the park be enlarged to 22,000 acres, including lands owned by the Village of Ellenville, the Lake Minnewaska Resort, the Mohonk Trust and the Mohonk Resort.

"Before a 22,000-acre state park is 'railroaded' into a reality, Ulster County taxpayers should weigh the consequences. What impact has the 7,000-acre state park had so far? How many people realize that the PIPC pays no property taxes in Ulster County or Rochester? Do you realize that the Town of Rochester has on its tax roll 7786 acres of state land designated 'forever wild' upon which the state does pay taxes to the Town of Rochester? This would indicate that the relative merits of 'state park' versus 'forever wild' should be evaluated by those who might be personally financially affected.

After asking consideration of the effect of removing 22,000 acres from the tax rolls and noting that combined taxes on the 3,500-acre Lake Minnewaska resort were over $111,000 in 1974, Mrs. Phillips concludes: "It is because of this alarming increase in tax load (over 400 per cent in 10 years) that we are being forced to consider changing our use of the land at Lake Minnewaska. We simply cannot afford to keep so much non-income producing land and continue to pay that kind of taxes. If it were not for this situation, we would not even consider selling any land. It is still possible that we may not be forced to do so."

"So please, gentlemen, survey the field and make sure that you are aiming at the ultimate target before you pull that trigger."

Vols Want Building Torn Down

By CARL GRAHAM

SAUGERTIES

A delegation of 25 volunteer firemen appeared at Monday night's Saugerties Village Board meeting to ask that a Partition Street apartment building destroyed by fire Feb. 11 be torn down.

Chief Joseph Schaffer, speaking for the firemen, told village trustees that the building, destroyed in a fire that left a dozen families homeless, was a safety hazard and a potential danger for children playing in the neighborhood.

"The insurance was paid to the owner," Schaffer said. "We gave him long enough to (tear it down). It would be a terrible thing if a kid was killed there. If anything happens, it will be a black eye for firemen and the village, too."

William Brinnier, village attorney, noted that the structure was still private property. "On an affidavit from the fire chief and fire commissioner, the board can do something about it, but it has no authority at present to tear it down," he said.

Schaffer said he would be in Brinnier's office today to sign the affidavit listing the building as a safety hazard so that razing work could begin as soon as possible.

Brinnier suggested that in the meantime the area be roped off and that parents in the area be warned to keep their children away from the building. Trustee Walter Keefe suggested that if it is roped off a walkway should be provided to keep pedestrians from walking in the street.

The volunteers also asked that something be done about financing the annual "Chief's Night" celebration. Trustee Erika Hinchey said she had written to the State Bureau of Audit and Control, which had criticized the use of village funds for the celebration.

Mrs. Hinchey read the bureau's reply to her letter, saying use of the term "Chief's Night" made it improper to use village funds. She introduced a resolution to change the event to the "annual inspection," which can be legally financed by village funds.

After the resolution passed, Schaffer drew a laugh by inviting trustees to attend the "annual inspection," which will be held tonight.

Keefe, the sanitation commissioner, reported that he had signed requests for state and federal aid for the village's proposed sewage treatment plant. "The village has gone as far as it can," Keefe said. "It's up to the state and federal people now." He said he was unable to give any timetable for a start on construction for the plant, which will also service the Barclay Heights sewage district.

The meeting was the last regularly scheduled session for Mayor Vernon "Joe" Benjamin and trustees Anthony "Cal" Hackett and Robert Gardner. Benjamin was defeated by former village clerk-treasurer James Gage in the March 18 election, Gardner lost in a bid for reelection, and Hackett did not run for reelection. The new board meets for the first time April 7.

Ali Stops Wepner... 'I Did Enough to Get By'

ALI LANDS DECISIVE PUNCH . . .

WEPNER HITS THE ROPES . . .

AND WEARS DAZED EXPRESSION

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali who said, "I did enough to get by," did just that Monday night in his heavyweight title fight here.

Ali toyed with challenger Chuck Wepner for most of the 15 rounds of his title fight before battering the 6-foot-5, 225-pound liquor salesman from Bayonne, N.J., to the canvas in the last 30 seconds of the 15th round, winning on a technical knockout, before 14,875 fans and a closed circuit television audience.

Ali then laid on the floor of the ring before getting up and leaving.

"There were too many fools jumping into the ring. I laid down on purpose, Ali said.

Ali said he would next fight European champion Joe Bugner, then maybe meet Joe Frazier again, "if he can come up with $10 million."

Ali, who was ahead on a card of the two officials scorers and referee Tony Perez, decked Wepner with a right to the jaw and Perez then stopped the fight.

"I had to stop it," said Perez. "He was out. I counted to nine and he fell back down again."

Perez said he stopped the fight with only 19 seconds remaining because, "I would have felt I would have been responsible for something disgraceful" if he had let it continue.

Ali fought much of the fight on the ropes, as he did against George Foreman in Africa.

"I laid on the ropes and let him do his thing," said Ali. "I let him tire out. Only he didn't tire so quickly."

Ali hammered away at Wepner's face with a quick left jab and scored heavily with several combinations. Wepner ended the fight with one eye swollen shut, the other eye cut and a bloody nose.

Wepner attempted to keep in close to Ali and pound at the body. However, he did little apparent damage.

"I did enough to get by," said Ali. "You don't see any cuts or scratches."

Ali said Wepner, who picked up $100,000 for the fight while Ali earned $1.5 million, was a "good fighter."

"He was better than you (the media) gave him credit. Foreman was easier, Norton was easier."

Ali also complained about what he called Wepner's rabbit punches and said Perez allowed Wepner to get away with them.

"He (Wepner) hit me on the head, then he (Perez) yelled at me," said Ali. "He is a dirty referee. I never want him to referee another one of my fights."

"I made a couple of mistakes in the fight I would like to fix up," said Wepner. "Maybe I was not getting off soon enough, trying to hard to land that right hand, and, yeah, I'd duck a little more."

"He's a great champion, a great fighter. I feel no shame to lose to a man of his stature. How many guys do you know who went 15 rounds with Muhammad Ali and who were still in there punching at the end."

Wepner was taken to Green Cross Hospital at Akron, Ohio, following the fight.

Hospital officials said today Wepner was treated and released from the emergency room. A hospital spokesman said the fighter was in satisfactory condition when he left the hospital but refused to disclose the extent of Wepner's injuries.

SPORTS / TODAY

THE DAILY FREEMAN TUESDAY, MARCH 25, 1975 11

Fans 'Fleeced, Rooked, Short-Changed'

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor
RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — People aren't fussy anymore. They settle for far less than they ever did. More than that, they have become injured and almost impervious to injustice, no matter how flagrant it is.

They were mugged here Monday night, all but hit over the head and their money taken from them for what was blatantly advertised as a world heavyweight championship, and they went home after it without so much as a whimper. They were fleeced, rooked, shortchanged and didn't seem to mind at all.

Awkward, amateurish Chuck Wepner went in against Muhammad Ali a 10-1 underdog when he should've really been at least 50-1, maybe even higher. Some of the punches he threw embarrassed him, he missed them so badly. He suffered the greatest possible indignity any professional can in the sixth round when the crowd of 18,847 actually laughed at him as he flailed away feebly and ineffectually at Ali, covering up and playing peekaboo with him in one of the corners.

Ali's overall performance against the tremendously willing but terribly clumsy Wepner was not the kind that will rush to his mind whenever any of his grandchildren ask him to tell them about his top 10 fights. Ali prepared for the contest indifferently and thought he could take out the rough-hewn, unpolished 35-year-old New Jerseyite whenever he liked, but he was wrong. Dead wrong.

Chuck Wepner, a ham-and-degger, wound up giving him more trouble than big bad George Foreman.

Only twice all night did the "people's champion" come anywhere close to looking the part, once in the fifth when he pumped a steady succession of razor-like left hands into Wepner's rapidly thickening features, and again 19 seconds from the conclusion of the fight when he sent the thin-haired challenger reeling into the ropes, then demolished him completely with a murderous right to the jaw that ended the one-sided farce.

Referee Tony Perez called it a 15-round TKO; like Wepner, he was a bit confused. Wepner had been on the canvas much longer than the required 10 seconds.

When it was over, Ali couldn't resist one final touch of burlesque.

He lay down in the ring and, with everybody milling around him, everybody, that is, who wasn't busy trying to revive the immobile Wepner, folded his arms behind his head and pretended to take a nap.

In his dressing room later, Ali lay on a rubbing table, naked except for a towel covering his loins, and listened vaguely as Wepner's post-fight comments were being pumped in over an amplifying system inside the room.

Ali listened silently.

"How long would you say he was on the canvas in the 15th?" someone standing alongside the champion asked him.

"I dunno," he said. "I don't count. I got my million and a half. That's all I know."

"What would you say he does best?"

"Take a punch."

"And how would you characterize your own performance?"

"Good, for a 33-year-old man who has been fighting so many years and still has that much left in him. I did just enough to get by. I won. You don't see no scratches. The only punches that hurt are the ones he hit me with in back of the head. Rabbit punches. The referee didn't do a thing about 'em. He's a dirty dog, that Perez. I don't ever want him refereein' any more of my fights."

Ali said he was upset with Wepner for those rabbit punches.

"Remember me hittin' him as he was goin' down in the last round? I tried to knock his head off. I tried to kill him. I never did that before to anyone. I had Quarry like that, but I backed off; I had Ellis and I backed off; I had Mathis, Blue Lewis and George Foreman, and I backed off all of 'em. But not Wepner. I really went after him. I tried to annihilate him."

Over in another corner of the room, one of Muhammad Ali's closest friends, someone who has known him a long time, knows when he's serious and knows when he's putting people on, listened to him and smiled.

"He has never tried to annihilate anybody in his whole life," said his friend. "He wouldn't know how."

'Dirty Ref'

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Muhammad Ali called Tony Perez "a dirty referee" Monday night following his heavyweight title fight with Chuck Wepner.

"Perez is not white and he's not black," Ali said. "He's Puerto Rican but you would have thought he was white the way he was calling the fight. He's more black than white. Perez is a dirty referee and I never want him in my corner ever because he's a dirty dog."

Wepner was butting all over the back of the head and using a lot of rabbit punches, Ali said.

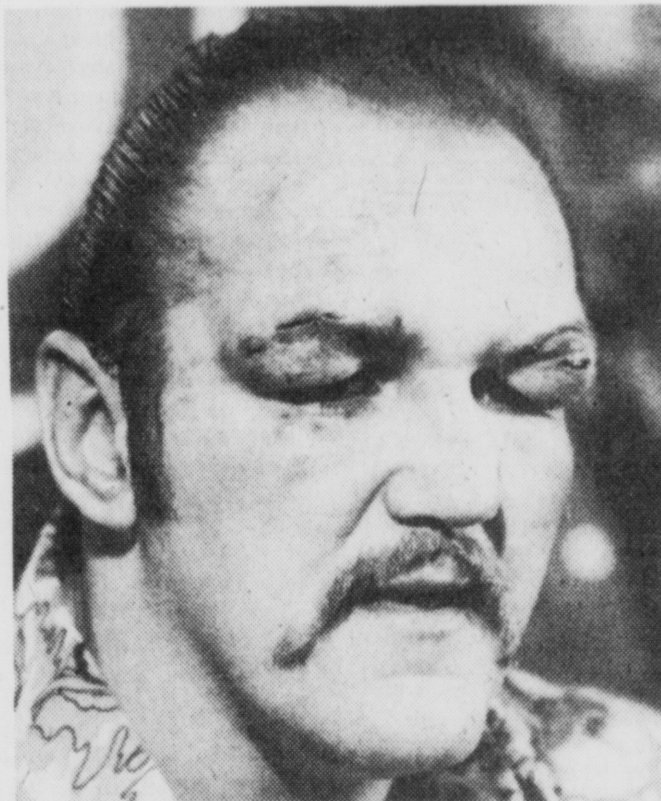

"Perez never stopped him but when I started doing it because Wepner was hitting me, Perez stopped me," said Ali.

Ali scored a TKO in the 15th round after Perez counted the challenger to a nine count.

"He's a dirty dog. I don't never want that Perez in the same ring with me. No way."

However, Perez saw it differently.

"Ali is just embarrassed that a guy like Wepner knocked him down and he has to take it out on the referee," said Perez, who gave Ali the mandatory eight-count in the ninth round after Wepner landed a solid right into Ali's side that sent the champ sprawling on his back. "It was a good fight and Ali is just embarrassed that Wepner got to him."

A BATTERED CHUCK WEPNER

Wants Rematch

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Dogged, bull-strong Chuck Wepner, proud of his honorable defeat in Monday night's title bout against heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, would welcome a rematch.

"I would like to fight him again," Wepner said at a postfight interview before being taken to a Cleveland area hospital for examination of his bloodied and shut left eye. "I made a couple of mistakes in the fight I'd like to fix up. Maybe I wasn't getting off soon enough, trying too hard to land that right hand."

"And, yeah, I'd duck a little more."

The 35-year-old challenger from Bayonne, N.J., fought creditably through the first 14½ rounds until Ali bombed him with a combination and referee Tony Perez stopped the fight with 19 seconds to go.

"I thought it was a very close fight and I had a shot to win it if I finished the 15th," Wepner said.

The Psyche

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — There sat the champ, Muhammad Ali, cocky as ever, trying to muster enough energy to defend his world heavyweight title against Chuck Wepner, the notorious bleeder.

"The 'Brown Bomber' (Joe Louis) came to see me dance," Ali said. "The world come to see me dance. I am not only the champion but I am also the fastest. Inspiration. I got it because my (Muslim) brothers are here. They come to see me dance, too."

Ali, who hardly trained for his bout with Wepner, was just getting warmed up in his dressing room before Monday night's travesty. He needed all the encouragement he could get, even if most of it came from himself.

The titleholder, who expected considerably less punishment from Wepner, the loser on a TKO in the 15th round when referee Tony Perez stopped the fight, was trying to get psyched up. He had already swallowed his teaspoon of honey and it was still too early to dress. So he watched a fight. It was the one in which Ken Norton pummeled Jerry Quarry around the ropes in New York.

"Angelo, your man's going to get beat," Ali told his trainer, Angelo Dundee, who picked Quarry to win. "He's getting ripped apart. Norton's annihilating him, Angelo. Your boy dropped his load. Look at Quarry. He's whupping himself. He got wore out by the third round by throwing all those punches

Norton, a devout practitioner of positive thinking, used a dozen or so left jabs to deliver a fistful of negative thoughts to Quarry, who was battered into retirement Monday night after suffering a fifth round technical knockout in their scheduled 12-round elimination bout at Madison Square Garden.

"I'm never gonna get cut again in the ring," said Quarry, whose face resembled a bloody pulp when referee Johnny LoBianco stopped the one-sided affair at 2:29 of the fifth round.

Eight stitches were needed to close the cut inflicted over Quarry's right eye by Norton in the third round. The 29-year-old California Irishman was also bleeding from cuts over his nose and in his mouth while his left eye was swollen shut.

While Norton, unmarked except for some of his opponent's blood which had rubbed off on parts of his body and around the waistband of his blue velvet trunks, put in his claim for a third and "rubber" match with champion Muhammad Ali, Quarry was being consoled by his handlers and his mother, who leaned over her son's body in the dressing room and kissed him.

A photographer was snapping pictures of Quarry while he was being administered to by a doctor and the beaten fighter warned the picture taker, "you better stop right now before I take a swing at you. I'd like to go out with a little dignity."

"I see no future for him in the ring," said Quarry's manager, Gil Clancy, who agreed with his fighter's decision to call it quits after 11 years in the ring—the last seven of them as a leading contender for the title.

The Norton-Quarry bout, witnessed by a crowd of 15,397, served as the closed circuit television preliminary to the Ali-Chuck Wepner title fight in Richfield, Ohio. Immediately after Norton and Quarry left the ring, a four-sided screen was lowered and the crowd watched Ali and Wepner.

Only one year ago it was Norton who had to be consoled after he suffered a second round knockout at the hands of then champion George Foreman in Venezuela. However, the 29-year-old ex-Marine from San Diego, who vaulted into boxing prominence two years ago when he scored a 12-round decision over Ali while breaking the champion's jaw, decided to continue his ring career and now rates as a top flight contender along with Foreman, who lost the crown to Ali in Zaire last October, and Joe Frazier.

"I was never hurt and I was in control all along," said Norton after scoring the 26th knockout of his career and raising his record to 33-3. "I want Ali now. I beat him once and the second time many people thought I won that one, too, even though they gave it to Ali."

"Kenny's at the peak of his career right now," said Norton's manager, Art Rivkin. "He's a more devastating puncher than when he fought Ali. His combinations and timing are much better."

"He's also a positive thinker. He really believes in that. He's done a lot of reading on the subject and practices mental preparedness. You can write off that loss to Foreman in Venezuela. We had so many problems down there such as taxes, who was to be the referee and accommodations. Kenny just couldn't concentrate."

Quarry, providing he goes through with his promise to quit the ring, figures to have a lot of time to concentrate—especially on his plans for a new career as a sports broadcaster. He had intimated before the Norton fight that he would pursue such a career if he lost.

In addition to being stopped by Norton, Quarry's record also shows two knockout defeats apiece at the hands of Ali and Frazier. The loss was his eighth against 50 wins and four draws.

Bass May Have Run Out of Last Chances

Steve Bass may have run out of last chances. The 32-year-old right-hander of the Pittsburgh Pirates is trying desperately to salvage something from a once-promising career that took a downward plunge two seasons ago when he suddenly lost his control, but he's having much difficulty finding the way back.

Even though every member of the Pirates, including Manager Danny Murtaugh, is pulling for Bass to straighten himself out, the club is running out of time. The Pirates will have to get their roster down to the 25-player limit within two weeks and based on his performance to date, Bass will not be one of the players kept.

His status with the club certainly took a nosedive Monday when he walked 11 batters in less than four innings in a 16-4 exhibition loss to the Chicago White Sox. Bass started the game and was charged with three walks and two runs in the first three innings then fell apart completely by walking eight batters in the fourth before Murtaugh mercifully relieved him.

The White Sox ended up scoring eight runs in the fourth en route to the victory which came in the second game of a doubleheader. In the opener the Pirates pounded White Sox ace Wilbur Wood for 14 hits and won, 8-2, in an abbreviated seven-inning contest. Richie Zisk drove in five runs for the Pirates in the opener.

In other games, Philadelphia walloped the New York Mets, 9-7, Los Angeles out-slugged Boston, 13-12, Cincinnati downed St. Louis, 6-4, Texas beat Minnesota, 8-5, Milwaukee nipped Chicago, 7-6, San Francisco routed San Diego, 15-4, Oakland topped California, 8-7, Atlanta defeated Montreal, 4-2, and Detroit edged the New York Yankees, 6-5, in 10 innings.

Greg Luzinski, also attempting a comeback from a knee injury that sidelined him almost all of last season, homered, singled and tripled to lead the Phils over the Mets. Bill Robinson also homered for the Phils while Dave Kingman hit a pair of homers for the Mets. Kingman now has seven homers in exhibition play.

Ron Cey drove in seven runs with two homers, one of them a grand slam, to highlight the Dodgers' triumph. There were eight homers in the game as a strong wind carried routine fly balls over the fence. Joe Ferguson also homered for the Dodgers while Fred Lynn, Rico Petrocelli, Rick Burleson, Kim Andrew and Tim Blackwell connected for Boston.

The Reds rallied for three runs off relief ace Al Hrabosky in the eighth inning to score their sixth straight Grapefruit League triumph and 11th in their last 12 games. Cincinnati collected five hits in the eighth, with John Vukovich singling home the tie-breaking run.

Braves' Owner Raps Knicks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Paul Snyder, owner of the Buffalo Braves, said Monday the New York Knicks were guilty of other violations of National Basketball Association by-laws in addition to tampering and that he planned to file charges against them with League Commissioner Walter Kennedy.

Snyder confirmed that he would follow through on the tampering charge with regard to the future of General Manager Eddie Donovan and indicated that he would bring up other charges against the Knicks as well. However, he refused to discuss what those other charges were.

"We're under an agreement with the commissioner that we're not supposed to be talking about it. We intend to try and arrange a private meeting tomorrow with the commissioner and with the Knicks at the league's Board of Governors meeting in Chicago, but there will be additional charges forthcoming," Snyder indicated that he expected to win his case against the Knicks for charges of tampering with

Donovan. Donovan, currently the general manager of the Braves who previously served in the same capacity with the Knicks, has announced that he will be leaving the Braves when his contract expires April 1 and stories have been circulating that he is leaving to rejoin New York as general manager.

Snyder contends that since Donovan is a stockholder in the Braves his employment by New York would constitute a violation of league by-laws. A source close to the Knicks, however, said that Donovan has already agreed with the Braves on the terms by which he would give up the stock.

Knicks' President Mike Burke has flatly denied that the Knicks are guilty of tampering. In a statement, Burke established the Knicks' position on the matter: "The New York Knickerbockers have not violated any provision of the NBA constitution or any rights of the Buffalo Braves with respect to Eddie Donovan. It is our understanding that Donovan is free to discuss employment with us. Although we have discussed with Donovan the terms in which he might be employed by the Knicks when he is no longer a stockholder or an employee of the Braves, we have not concluded an agreement."

Kennedy has ordered officials from both clubs to appear before him April 3 to answer charges of tampering. Kennedy called the hearing in response to a request by Snyder, who had asked that the issue be considered by the league's Board of Governors during its meeting Tuesday.

Princess Eyes Olympic Berth
LONDON (UPI) — Princess Anne and her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, both hope to be members of Britain's equestrian team in the Montreal Olympic Games.
"I wouldn't be doing myself justice as a competitor if I didn't actually think I would like to go to the Olympics," says Princess Anne in an interview published in Sports-weekend magazine today.
For the first time since their wedding in November, 1973, Princess Anne and Capt. Phillips talked openly about themselves, their hopes, ambitions, training plans and rivalry with each other.
Princess Anne competes with her gold medalist husband in the Badminton horse trials next month — an event which could be a key to eventual Olympic selection.
She said of her sporting rivalry with Capt. Phillips: "There's only one rival for a team, and that's me. He's already there ... you see, I'm still fighting."

Crozier Hospitalized
BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Buffalo Sabres' goaltender Roger Crozier will remain hospitalized for a few more days, but left winger Rick Martin has been released after treatment for tonsillitis, the Sabres said Monday.
Crozier, who suffers from chronic pancreatitis, was hospitalized Sunday after reporting stomach pains. He was scheduled to be released Monday, but doctors decided to keep him a few more days when he reported pains again.
Martin was hospitalized during the weekend with fever and was released late Sunday.

Tom Seaver, apparently recovered from his arm miseries of 1974, will be shooting for an all-time record in baseball this season—eight straight seasons with 200 or strikeouts.

Despite being plagued by hip problems in 1974, the New York Mets righthander struck out 201 batters to become the first National League Pitcher in history to strike out 200 or more men seven consecutive years.

In accomplishing this feat, Seaver joined such illustrious company as Walter Johnson (1910-16) and Rube Waddell, (1902-08).

Mary Beth Pechloff, the area's outstanding girl swimmer, has qualified for two events in the National AAU Short Course National Swimming Championships at Cincinnati, Ohio, April 9-12. Competing in the Region I qualifier at Yale University, Miss Pechloff set career records for herself in qualifying for the 100 yard backstroke (1:01.19) and 100 yard fly-stroke (:59.19).

Miss Pechloff competes with the Kingston High School team and has received advance training under Coach Art Stocking of New Paltz State at the Stone Dock Swim Club.

Another ex-Kingston High swimmer, Ann St. Denis, just missed qualifying in the 100 backstroke at Yale. Her time of 1:01.6 fell just short of the cutoff time of 1:03. Miss St. Denis has been accepted at Arizona State, which produced the 1974 women's national swimming champions.

Not only was Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia the first Phillie to lead the National League in homers since Chick Klein's 28 in 1933, but his 36 homers in 1974 made him the first Phillie to lead both major leagues since Gavvy Caravath did it with 24 in 1915.

For Schmidt, his second year in the National League was a complete turnaround from his rookie campaign of 1973. In '74 he led the league with 36 homers and was second in RBI's with 116. He batted .282 in '73 the charismatic Schmidt, now 25, hit .196 with 18 homers and 82 RBI's.

In winning the coveted Mel Ott Award, emblematic of the home run championship, Schmidt became the first third baseman to lead the National League since Eddie Mathews of Milwaukee did it in 1959 with 46.

Liz McGrath, the former Onteora High School ski star now a resident of Vermont, continued to enhance her national ranking in a highly successful winter campaign.

She placed eighth in the Giant Slalom in the Eastern Cup competition, an FIS event; was 69th in a field of more than 200 in the Women's Slalom at Stowe, Vt. where the event was won by Marilyn Cochran. Miss McGrath placed 10th in the Randi Stowell Trophy competition in the Downhill at Sugarloaf, Maine.

Miss McGrath currently ranks in the seeding list of the Eastern Ski Association. The list is headed by Cindy Nelson.

DOTS AND DASHES: Ben Fields of Seton Hall, a transfer from New Paltz State, was winner of the high jump in the Metropolitan Track and Field meet at Princeton. Fields and two others jumped 6-10, but Fields won less attempts...One of the highest women's bowling triples in area history was registered by Rita Cascone of Woodbourne in a mixed league at Kiamesha Lanes in Sullivan County. A 178-average bowler, Rita knocked off games of 254, 244, and 237... Denise Ann Merriken of Red Hook was on the starting five for the North Adams State College. She is a sophomore transfer from Western New England College, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Merriken of Red Hook.

Bryan Brent, who coached Wallkill High to five Ulster County Athletic League track and field championships and three Section 9 titles, has returned to the fold after a break since the 1960-67 era.

Brent was a track star at Manhattan College in 1955-59 and has been teaching science since 1967. Athletic Director Si Pesavento couldn't be happier about Brent's return.

Raceway Heralds Opening

MONTICELLO

Monticello Raceway heralded the opening of its 18th season here Monday with its annual media luncheon. The meet begins Thursday at 8 p.m.

Race secretary Ralph Swalsky used the occasion to announce the highlight of the season, the Monticello Raceway—New York City OTB Classic which will be the richest race in harness racing history with a minimum purse of $250,000.

The Classic, for New York bred three year old pacing colts and fillies, is slated for Sunday, July 27, and may reach an eventual purse of $300,000. The existing top harness prize is the $223,000 of the Prix d' Amerique at Paris Vincennes Race Course.

The race has already attracted such names as Silk Stockings, the top two-year old of 1974, Tarport Hap, winner of 20 of 26 races an $150,051, and Golden Fulia, a 2:01.2 half-miler. Owl, Momentum, Meadow Roy, High Frontier, Father's Image, Shirley's Beau, Avon Yankee Tom and Saratoga Rick are also candidates.

Swalsky said ten starters will be selected from an original list of 191. Half that number paid a $300 sustaining fee, and a further $2,300 will be required by nominees. Elimination races with a $6,000 target will be run beginning July 20 if necessary to reduce the field.

Another new feature at the raceway this season has been introduced to reduce crowd congestion. Turnstiles, operated by tokens which may be purchased in advance at the ticket booths, will help speed the patrons through the gates.

Thursday is the earliest opening in the raceway's history, and the meet will run through September 14. The track will be close this Sunday for the Easter holiday.

Greenberg said the raceway will resume its Sunday matinee programs of ten daylight races with a post time of 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, April 6.

Monticello will be closed on Mondays until July with the exception of May 26, the new, legal observance of Memorial Day.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, uncertain about events in the Middle East and Indochina, opened lower today in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 19-point loser Monday, was off 2.19 to 741.24 shortly after the opening. Declines led advances, 279 to 48, among the 463 issues crossing the tape.

Turnover amounted to around 670,000 shares.

Wall Street was deeply concerned by tensions surrounding the assassination of King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's setback in negotiations to bring peace to the region. President Ford has ordered a reassessment of U.S. policy in the Middle East.

Shop-Rite for

SHOP-RITE IS QUALITY ASSURANCE.

The on-premise, fully equipped testing laboratory located at our warehouse distribution complex has got to be one of the busiest places in town. Our lab technicians test samples from all incoming shipments of Shop-Rite products. That's a lot of tests! What do they look for? To see that products conform to the specifications we set for our suppliers. Our lab has the capacity of weighing up to 1/10,000 of a gram while doing analytical breakdowns of food components. The colorimeter does the final check for dextrose. Solids in fruit juice and other liquid foods are tested by the refractometer. Centrifugal equipment tests for butterfat in ice cream. The viscometer tests for "mouth feel" in food and for thickness in non-foams. Microbiological testing reveals the quality of ingredients and cleanliness during manufacturing. But most important, our products are people tested - and only then - Shop-Rite sells it.

Follower of Guru Dissillusioned by Divine Light Finances

DENVER (UPI) — Michael Garson became a devotee of the Guru Maharaj Ji's Divine Light Mission in May, 1974. He resigned nine months later because he said he "could not tolerate the contradictions."

Garson became the mission's financial advisor one month after his conversion and it became his job to find ways to pay off the mission's $300,000 debt. He said one method was to ask recent converts for donations, preferably their life savings.

One woman in Canada, Darby McNeal, pledged her $400,000 trust fund to the mission and Garson said he has flown to her Canadian home twice in efforts to prevent the mission from taking the woman's money.

"Bob Mishler, the mission's executive director, talked Darby into signing over power of attorney shortly after she joined," Garson said.

He said the transaction was never completed because Darby's sister, Sarah McNeal, of Louisville, Ky., said the 31-year-old Canadian was not able to handle financial affairs.

"Darby has a total inability to survive unless she is handed a check each month," Garson said. "She has no work history and no means of earning a living. She really needs help in financial matters."

"The mission hopes to use Darby's trust fund to pay off its standing deficit," he said.

Garson said a major reason for the mission's financial troubles was due to its 17-year old leader's "material wishes which take out 60 per cent of the income."

Included in the Maharaj Ji's earthly domain are eight sports cars, mansions in Denver and Los Angeles, plus an assortment of stereo gear, expensive watches and clothing.

Garson said "When the Guru wants something, he gets it," or a new house, he gets it," Garson said.

Garson said traditions, said the organization's "Millennium '75" also played a key role in accumulating additional debt. He said the bill for the Millennium religious festival held at the Houston Astrodome, was only paid when mission equipment and files were repossessed.

Garson said donations to the Denver-based organization have fallen off considerably from the $100,000 monthly average at the guru's 1973 height of recruitment to the current $40,000 a month average.

"They have started a campaign to have all active members donate 10 per cent of their incomes, but that has not been a big success," he said.

Garson, who is planning an expose on the workings of the mission, said another of the organization's handicaps was its attraction of persons with meager incomes.

"Most of them cannot hold a job that pays more than $2 an hour and then there are those in the Ashrams—those who work for the guru alone—who total $72 and are totally supported by the Mission," he said.

Garson said mission officials have learned that "it's the law of land that they have to pay for things by the date promised."

Sharp had a mild heart attack last fall while working in his clinic and called his son who lives across the bay in Corpus Christi to come over and treat him. But before his son arrived, Sharp had to treat some patients of his own.

"A mother brought her son into my office with a badly cut foot," he said. "I told my nurse to start sewing him up, and a man walked in with a fishhook in him. I was taking care of him when my son walked in."

The island where Sharp works is proving it's hard to replace a legend.

"We need to get someone semi-retired," Sharp said. "If he could come here, I would do some of the work and he could do some of the work, and we could both go fishing most of the time."

Sharp jokes about the problem because it is his nature. But Sharp, pharmacist Lynn Gavit and Steve Frishman, publisher of the bi-weekly newspaper South Jetty, are serious about their search for a doctor.

"We're desperately searching," Gavit said. "Our mean population in the wintertime is three, maybe two thousand people. But starting in March we jump to as many as 20,000 people. It's kind of a desperate situation to be on an island on the sea without a doctor. We're turning over rocks."

Gavit pointed out Breckenridge, Colo., population 3,000, has a hospital and plenty of doctors.

"I guess more doctors like to ski than fish," he said.

"If a doctor comes here, he'll be sold, I guarantee it."

"I moved here because I love to live here. I guess everybody else moved here because they got disgusted with the big cities."

Sharp said young doctors, his son included, don't want to run their own practice.

"Physicians are becoming frightened by working without six specialists next door," he said. "The money is here, the work is here, and the fishing is good. What else could a person want?"

The Why Of Falling In Love

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a recent press release, Sen. William Proxmire accused the National Science Foundation of squandering $465,000 on three "futile and wasteful" studies of love.

Here is a classic case of leaping before looking, which often happens in senatorial press releases. Had Proxmire thought the matter over carefully I'm sure he would have concluded the money was well spent.

For some people, $465,000 wouldn't even pay a month's alimony. Yet in this instance it could solve the age-old mystery of why people fall in love.

The point Proxmire overlooked is that you have to know why something happens before you can prevent it.

And certainly it would be in the public interest for people to be able to avoid falling in love.

Statistics show that 66.34 percent of the people who fall in love fall in love with the wrong people. Which can be a soul-searing experience. As well as frightfully expensive.

If people knew why they fell in love they would then have at least a fighting chance of tumbling in the right direction.

As it is, the process is based entirely on chance. Those who fall in love simply stumble into it. "Tis done without rhyme or reason."

Well, maybe a few rhymes are involved. Moon, June, spoon. But of reason there is none.

The result is a high rate of shattered romances, heartache, broken homes, heavy drinking, lonely teardrops and evenings spent making judo.

Most of which could be avoided if people knew what they were doing when they fell in love.

We won't have the answer until the studies are completed, but let's assume, for illustration purposes, that falling in love is caused by tight shoes.

Here's the scene: A table for two in some secluded rendezvous. Candlelight and wine. Soft music and roses. Cramped feet.

The girl, as girls are wont to do, slips off her shoes under the table. The boy, who has a hole in one sock, remains shoeless.

Result: He falls in love, she doesn't.

The only thing worse would be for both to keep their shoes on and wind up unhappily married.

The point I'm making is that if people knew why they fell in love they would stick to barefoot dates until compatibility was established.

And that, Proxmire to the contrary notwithstanding, would be the first faint gleam of rationale in male-female relations.

Offices Closed

KINGSTON

All Ulster county offices will be closed all day, Good Friday, March 28 with the exception of the county clerk's office, county treasurer, county legislature and Surrogate Court.

The Motor Vehicle Bureau will be closed, according to Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago but all essential services such as those in the infirmary, county jail and sheriff's office will be maintained.

Spring Cleanup

Radar-equipped city police cruisers made the first warm day of spring an expensive one for some 30 motorists Sunday afternoon and early evening. A total of 27 motorists were stopped for speeding—most of them on the Boulevard. Douglas Smith of Saugerties avoided a speeding citation but found himself charged with following too closely, driving while his control of his car was obstructed, unsafe tires and resisting arrest. He spent the night in the county jail in lieu of $100 fine and appeared in city court Monday.

Ban The Dime

UPI

A distressed-looking elderly man emerged from the men's room at New York's LaGuardia Airport and searched the eyes of the crowd.

After a moment, he approached another man.

"Excuse me," the old fellow blushed, "but, well, have you got a dime?"

The second man produced the change.

"Thanks," the older man murmured, adding, by way of explanation: "I only had a $10 bill."

Smiling, he ambled gratefully toward the men's room.

Such dilemmas, some legislators feel, should be a thing of the past in the land of the free. Women's rights groups have made the pay toilet a symbol of sexist oppression, saying they discriminate against women.

But if the efforts of small bands of crusaders are realized, pay toilets, like nickelodeons, could become just another bit of nostalgic Americana.

Chicago pioneered the drive to ban the pay toilet. The contraptions were outlawed in the Windy City in 1973.

"It sounds odd," said Earl Kenefick, who lobbied for Chicago's pay-toilet ban, "but it was really an issue. We pointed it the 'Pay as you go' plan and pointed out that some people just couldn't keep up with the payments."

In California, a bill banning pay toilets was signed into law last year.

The law was authored by Assembly member March Fong, now California Secretary of State, who had argued that pay toilets were "discriminatory against women."

Florida also has banned pay toilets.

Similar legislation won overwhelming support in the New Mexico House of Representatives, but was killed by the Senate.

Such legislation is pending in more than a dozen other states.

Maine State Rep. Raymond Faucher has authored a bill to bar pay toilets in his state, saying the right to "pursue life, liberty and happiness without paying a dime" should be among the fundamental rights of all Maine citizens.

"If the Creator had meant folks to use pay toilets," Faucher said, "they'd have been born with dimes or quarters in their hands."

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Your judgment is questionable regarding the course of action you are pursuing. Continue to kid yourself and steps will have to be retraced.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
It is far easier for you to make promises today than it is for you to keep them. Don't volunteer — unless you're sincere.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
This is not the day to gamble on others to bail you out of situations where you have gotten in too deep. Bring your own lifejacket.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Don't push your budget to the breaking point because you want your family to keep up with the Joneses. It won't stand the strain.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22)
Refrain from telling tall tales today. The stories you embellish later come home to roost, much to your embarrassment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You have a tendency at this time to count material blessings before they become reality. Wait till they're in the bank.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
You're too easily swayed today by others' opinions. Be sure the hotshot who's bending your ear has worthy wares.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Don't expect more from others than you would give if the roles were reversed. Put yourself in the shoes of the donor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Friends want to treat you kindly today. They'll say what they think you want to hear. Don't put too much stock in their words.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Don't boast today of how you overcame an adversary. One who is listening closely is a better friend of your opponent than he is of yours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
The only one impressed by your big ideas today will be yourself. Keep this in mind if you're addressing an audience.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
That business deal you're pushing could boomerang. The profit you anticipate is likely to come from YOUR pocket!

Thinking Like Declarer Helps

There is an old story about the man who found a lost horse. He explained he tried to think like a horse and then looked where the horse would go.

Mansion Is Damaged

The Georgia Governor's Mansion was heavily damaged during a tornado Monday. Gov. George Busbee and his family were not hurt. The Mansion is a showcase built at state expense of millions. The tornado did extensive damage in an industrial area and then swung to an affluent residential neighborhood where the Mansion is. (UPI)

A Devastating Tornado

ATLANTA (UPI) — Gov. George Busbee was one of the lucky ones. He was taking a shower when he heard a roar and felt the huge Governor's Mansion shake.

Busbee leaped out of the shower, threw on a jumpsuit and assembled his family in a room in the middle of the mansion. The tornado ripped into the three-story Greek-style home, peeling part of the roof off and casting it into the backyard.

"It was a shock," Busbee said later. He and his family survived uninjured.

Others were not so fortunate. The twister hopped across the northwestern part of Atlanta during the breakfast hour Monday, killing three persons and injuring at least 170 others. It struck the ground eight times in all.

The tornado destroyed or damaged hundreds of homes and apartments, split buildings, hurled railroad boxcars into the air, smashed tractor-trailer trucks, uprooted trees and ripped apart 10,000 sacks of mail.

At the Governor's Mansion, the twister tore off the massive white columns and parts of the roof from the building, and chewed through the pines, oaks and magnolias on the 17-acre estate, snapping or uprooting about half of the trees.

After the twister struck the mansion, rain poured into the bared upper rooms, damaging expensive furniture, paintings and rugs. The dead were Arthur Harold Sausmer, 29, a salesman whose car was buried under a falling roof; Catherine Hunken, whose body was found in a residential area; and Mark Howard, 24, killed in a warehouse.

Mayor Maynard Jackson called it "the most severe tornado in Atlanta in many years." He declared a state of emergency for Atlanta, and Busbee issued an emergency declaration for Fulton County.

Col. Doug Embry of the state Civil Defense said at least 170 persons were treated for injuries at eight hospitals.

The tornado hit several large apartment complexes, damaging cars and splitting buildings.

The Southeastern Postal Service Truck Facility was left a shambles and Supt. E.A. Milner said 10,000 sacks of mail, most of it fourth class, were lost.

"It lasted five minutes and it just shook," said Pam Tibbs, a resident at Cross Creek apartments where officials said 600 of 900 units were damaged. "I'm very thankful I'm alive and unharmed."

Buildings were smashed at Southern Railway's big Inman yards. Railroad cars were tossed around like toys and an estimated 70 to 75 tractor trailer trucks were smashed.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After recent setbacks, President Ford is making his first major reappraisal of U.S. foreign policy in the Middle East and Southeast Asia.

His chief spokesman says Ford is looking for new solutions to problems he inherited.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen said "the problems we're having in various parts of the world are inherited. Now the President is in charge of foreign policy. He wants to take a fresh look."

The deteriorating situation in Southeast Asia and the breakdown of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy between Egypt and Israel has prompted Ford to begin his review of policies set by former President Nixon and which he has faithfully followed.

Ford may have something to say about Vietnam when he meets later today with a South Vietnamese parliamentary group.

The Southeast Asia review follows major military losses in South Vietnam and Cambodia — also decisions by Thailand to halt the U.S. arms airlift to Cambodia from that country and to serve notice American troops eventually must be withdrawn from Thailand.

Ford will oversee the review of foreign policy in both Asia and the Middle East, with his diplomatic, military and intelligence advisers undertaking the study under the direction of Kissinger. Kissinger, however, is expected to begin a tour of Latin America on April 7.

Although many believe Kissinger is the dominant force in Ford's diplomacy, Nessen insists Ford is making the foreign policy decisions. The President appears to be taking a greater interest in putting his own stamp on foreign policy in light of recent events.

Nessen says Ford has no intention of pulling back on American involvement in the trouble spots. "He feels the United States' role should not be diminished."

Nessen and Kissinger have denied any implication the policy re-evaluation is aimed at intimidation of countries the United States assists with military supplies.

Arab World Urged to Mobilize

By United Press International

Egypt has called on the Arab world to mobilize against Israel. Israel has vowed to stand alone against threats and pressures.

In Cairo, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi asked the 20-nation Arab League Monday night to strangle Israel economically and politically.

He blamed Israel for the collapse of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's recent peace mission and accused the Jewish state of "playing with words" instead of negotiating.

"In the face of this Israeli arrogance, we must escalate the campaign to isolate Israel and expel it from the international community, the United Nations and world societies, like with South Africa and Rhodesia," Fahmi said.

In Tel Aviv, the Israeli parliament Monday voted in near rare unity — 92-4 with six abstentions — to back Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin handling of the Kissinger talks.

For the first time in five years, the hardline Likud party, the major opposition group in Israel, solidly supported the government.

Likud leader Menahem Begin urged total support because "this is a serious hour for our country and because of this we must make a supreme effort to stand together against threats and pressure."

Rocket Firing in Cambodia

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Five Communist rockets landed just outside the American embassy in the Cambodian capital today, forcing Ambassador John Gunther Dean to leave his office and take cover in a ground floor shelter.

The rockets were among 26 fired into the city or the nearby airport this morning. One of the missiles landed within 50 yards of one of the American airlift planes, but apparently caused no damage.

Outside the city, the government defense perimeter continued to shrink as insurgents increased pressure west and north of the capital and at the isolated river town of Neak Luong.

Government forces suffered a major setback late Monday when they were forced to abandon the village of Tuol Leap near the rocket belt launching area for the airport barrage.

Tuol Leap, only six miles west of the airport, was considered important because government control of the village kept insurgents out of accurate rocket range.

Last week, when the insurgents were able to move in around Tuol Leap, their rocket barrages damaged two U.S. supply planes and forced a 2½-day suspension in the airlift.

Two government soldiers were killed and six others wounded in the retreat from Tuol Leap. Field reports also said the government troops left behind a considerable amount of ammunition, which apparently fell in to rebel hands. "That's a setback," said one American official of the retreat.
